Community Education Newsletter

Greetings from the Superintendent's Desk

Weather Delays & Cancellations

Just a reminder that we will have school on Friday, February 20. This is a make-up day from our missed day of school on December 18.

I've had several people ask me how I make the decision to cancel school in the event of inclement weather, so I thought I'd take some time in this month's newsletter to explain the process. First, I regularly check several weather apps to watch forecasts. If a storm or a potential storm is in the forecast for our area, I spend even more time watching radar and hourly forecasts to see how it will impact our area.

I also rely on the input from NDDOT road crew members who can provide first-hand information about our local roads. Additionally, I make phone calls to bus drivers and other people who live in various parts of our school district. Their local perspectives help to give me a better idea of how conditions may vary across all of our routes. Lastly, I will personally drive roads in various parts of our district to evaluate road and weather conditions. Our first bus leaves the school at approximately 5:30 AM, so a decision on a late start or cancellation must be made by that time.

These decisions are not taken lightly, and involve careful consideration of multiple sources of information. Above all else, the safety of our students and staff is always the top priority. While no decision will ever feel perfect for everyone, please know that great care, time, and thought go into each one.

Student Supervision at Athletic Events

We have had some great crowds at our home basketball games and I'm proud of the strong support for our teams. With that being said, I'd like to remind families that all students attending athletic events are expected to be seated and supervised by their parents throughout the duration of the games. These expectations are outlined in our student handbook and are in place to ensure a safe and enjoyable environment for everyone in attendance. If students are found loitering, they will be directed to return to their seats with their parents. We appreciate your support and cooperation in reinforcing these expectations with your children. Thank you for helping us uphold these standards and for supporting our teams during the rest of the season.

Early Dismissal on February 25

We will have an early dismissal on Wednesday, February 25 at 1:15 for staff professional development.

Open Enrollment

Any families that live outside of Medina's school district and wish to enroll their child into Medina Public School for the 2026-2027 school year (and have not done so in previous years) will need to fill out an open enrollment application and return it to the school no later than February 28, 2026. The open enrollment application can be found at https://www.nd.gov/dpi/sites/www/files/documents/SFN%20Forms/SFN19378.pdf or you can request a copy from the school. If you have questions, please contact the school.

PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

The long, cold days of winter are upon us. However, it is getting lighter earlier and staying lighter later. We can do it! We can make it through.

A similar feeling happens here at school. We have been in session for over half of the year, and learning new material is happening every day. We are past the review days at the beginning of the year. The content and concepts are getting harder. Schedules seem to be getting busier, and time at home seems to be less. How do we help our learners as we navigate this time of year?

We need to help our students be responsible for how they spend their time. When students have homework to do or skills to practice, help them set up a consistent time to do this. Homework and fact practice can be done when they get home from school. If they have practice after school, it might be better for them to shower, have some food, and then attend to homework. Setting schoolwork as a priority when they get home will give them time to enjoy activities after the work is completed. If they are allowed to do other things before schoolwork, they might be too tired to attend to the work.

Visit with your child about what areas or skills they think they are good at and what areas they need to work on and practice. For the areas they feel strong in, talk with them about those topics at supper or in the car. They might even be able to teach you something new! Engaging them in conversations about their learning helps them see value in what they are learning. For areas that are a bit of a struggle, try 10–15 minutes of practice on nights when they don't have homework. This helps keep the homework routine in place.

Be mindful of your child's schedule and how they are responding to your current routine. If you notice that your child(ren) are stressed, tired, or cranky, it might be time to make some adjustments. Think carefully about which activities are "must-dos" in your family's schedule and which ones are extras. Schedules may need to be adjusted to support your child's well-being. You might also plan some in-home game or movie nights to enjoy as a family.

If you see that your child is struggling more than normal, please reach out to their teacher or our counselor. We are here to help your child learn, grow in responsibility, and feel safe. We love working with our families to make school and learning an encouraging environment.

COUNSELOR CONNECTION

At the beginning of the school year, we began gathering feedback from district families about the possible development of a school-wide backpack program.

A backpack program would offer families the option to receive a bag of shelf-stable, easy-to-prepare meals and snacks for weekends and school breaks, when school meals are not available. To help maintain confidentiality, bags would be discreetly placed in student lockers or backpacks on the last day of the school week.

Any family who feels they could benefit from additional food support would be eligible to participate. There would be no cost to families and no income requirements to qualify.

I wanted to share a brief update on our information-gathering efforts. While we have received some helpful feedback, we are hoping to hear from a few more families before making decisions about next steps. We also learned that the original QR code may not have worked consistently for everyone. We apologize for that and are pleased to share that issue has been resolved.

A new QR code has been provided for easy access to the survey. If you haven't already had a chance to participate, we kindly invite you to take a few minutes (about five) to share your feedback. Whether or not your family would plan to sign up for the program, your input is valuable. In addition to understanding potential needs, we are also interested in hearing from those who may be willing to support the program should it move forward.

Tips Families Can Use to Help Children Do Better in School

February 2026

Medina Public School

Encourage your child to engage in more complex thinking

Memorizing a fact just scratches the surface of learning. To really understand something, students need to think about it in more complex ways—by evaluating, comparing and applying what they've learned. This helps them see how the material fits into the "bigger picture."

To give your child practice thinking in more depth:

- Promote problem-solving. If your student has forgotten how to do an assignment, ask, "How could you find out how to do it?" Could your child call a classmate? Look over work from class? Check a class website? Encourage your child to make a plan and put it into action.
- Discuss issues and events in the news. Have your child read an article on a topic with many sides, then talk about it at dinner. Find out what your child thinks about the issue and why. But don't stop there. After listening to your child, say, "I can see why you feel this way. But why do you think other people might think differently?"
- Talk about the learning process. After your child completes a big project for school, help your child consider how it went. Ask, "How difficult was this to finish? What did you learn about how to do projects that will help next time?

Keys for raising disciplined learners

Maintaining discipline and developing students' self-discipline contributes to a positive learning environment. Effective discipline helps children learn from poor choices and make better ones in the future.

These discipline strategies can help you teach positive behavior:

1. Establish rules and consequences you can consistently enforce. It won't take long for your child to learn whether you really intend to enforce rules. Give in just once and you'll likely face an argument every day.
2. Speak calmly when responding to misbehavior. Yelling teaches children that it is OK to lose control when feeling upset.
3. Describe misbehavior, rather than criticizing your child. Saying "It was your sister's turn to use the computer and you wouldn't stop your game," is more helpful than "Don't be so selfish." Then, offer a reminder of the rule ("We take fair turns") and the consequence ("No more games today.").

Model social interactions

Children who lack social skills can have trouble learning and succeeding in school. Be a social skills role model for your elementary schooler. Let your child see you introducing yourself, staying connected to friends, sharing and being kind to others. Read books about friendship and cooperation aloud. Then, talk about the stories together.

Source: K. Steedly, Ph.D. and others, "Social Skills and Academic Achievement, Evidence for Education, NICHCY.

Help with test preparation

Your child will have to do the studying for tests. But you can help your student be physically prepared to do well. To support test success, ensure that your child:

- Sticks to a healthy sleep schedule. Staying up late studying increases anxiety, which interferes with thinking.
- Eats a nutritious breakfast.
- Dresses in comfortable layers, so that clothes won't be a distraction.
- Relaxes and knows you care. Take deep breaths together and send your child out the door with a big hug.

Meaning boosts memory

When students link new information to something meaningful to them, they recall it better. To encourage this, help your child create a story that weaves new material into familiar situations and locations. For example, to recall the first three U.S. presidents in order, your child might say, "One day, George Washington went to the park. He met John Adams by the seesaw. Then, the two of them ran into Thomas Jefferson by the slide and all three played tag."

Q&A What can I do to convince my child to speak in class?

Q: My second grader is outgoing at home but very shy at school. My child doesn't like answering questions in class for fear of being wrong. How can I help my student become more comfortable participating in the classroom?

A: First, talk with your child's teacher. What is the teacher's perspective on your child's reluctance to speak in class? Ask what the teacher does to encourage your child to participate. You can also ask if the teacher can give your child opportunities to speak up without pressure—in small group situations, for example. After mastering a skill, could your child "tutor" a classmate?

Next, talk with your child. Say that everyone makes mistakes—and your child probably will, too. But emphasize that mistakes are not the end of the world. What's more, they provide opportunities to learn from them and get smarter.

Don't make too much of this right now. Some children are hesitant to speak up in the early grades. As they gain confidence, they open up and join in class discussions. You say your child is outgoing at home. That's great. Feeling safe speaking up at home bolsters the confidence to do the same in school. And remember, some children are just shy by nature—and they often do just as well as their more outgoing peers in school.

Parent Quiz Do you make following directions easy?

When children follow instructions carefully they achieve better results—in the classroom, on schoolwork and at home. Are you helping your child practice this elementary skill? Answer yes or no to the questions below:

___1. Do you ask for your child's attention before giving instructions?

___2. Do you divide complex directions into steps your child can follow one by one?

___3. Do you encourage your child to reread or repeat directions before beginning a task?

___4. Do you make and post checklists of tasks your child can follow?

___5. Do you praise your child for following instructions carefully and completely?

How well are you doing?

More yes answers mean you are teaching your child the importance of paying attention to instructions. For each no, try that idea.

"Our instructions need to include both what to do and why it is important."
—Belinda Letchford

Spark interest in history

Does history seem lifeless and remote when your child reads about it in textbooks? Quality historical fiction offers a vivid view of the human side of history's facts, dates and statistics. To bring history to life for your child through reading:

- Look for titles that present events and details accurately. Check reviews or ask your child's teacher for suggestions.
- Read books aloud that are a little too challenging for your child to read alone.
- Encourage your child to read more than one book about the same era. Discuss the similarities and differences.

Build a world of knowledge

It's a big world out there! Help your child discover it with these activities:

- Collecting. Suggest that your child collect objects from countries around the globe, such as stamps or postcards, and learn about where they come from.
- Mapping. Help your child find places where relatives live on a map. How many ways are there to get there from your home?
- Sourcing. Have your child read labels to find out where items in your home were made and locate the sources on a map.

Love and learn together

This Valentine's Day, share a love of learning with your child! As a family:

- Read tales of caring and love.
- Estimate. Fill a jar with red candies. Ask family members to estimate the number of pieces, then let your child count them.
- Learn to say "I love you" in several different languages.
