Our Commitment to Military Students

At our school, we take great care in welcoming new military students and helping them feel at home from the moment they arrive. First, our student leaders greet them and serve as friendly guides, showing them around the building and helping them learn the ins and outs of our school routines. They walk alongside our new students during those first days to ease the transition and ensure they never feel alone. In addition, our counselors host a monthly New Student Lunch Bunch, where newcomers gather in a small-group setting to enjoy lunch, talk about how things are going, ask questions, and build connections with both staff and peers. Finally, our counselors collaborate with our Military Family Life Counselor (MFLC) by sharing the names of new military students so she can offer additional support tailored to their unique experiences. This layered approach ensures every military student feels welcomed, supported, and seen.
