HYDE COUNTY, NORTH CAROLINA

Take the road less traveled to a place where time seems to move a little slower…"

Rural Hyde County, NC is one of the last underdeveloped areas on the Eastern seaboard. It is the second-least populated county in the state. However, at 612 square miles, it ranks as the 24th largest of NC's 100 counties in land area.

The Alligator and Pungo Rivers provide our north and west boundaries. To the east and south lies the Pamlico Sound. Mattamuskeet Lake, NC's largest natural lake, and two smaller lakes - the Alligator and the Pungo - occupy a large portion of the mainland. And a ferry ride away across the Pamlico Sound are 16 miles of pristine beaches on the Atlantic Ocean. Hundreds of miles of winding creeks, inlets, and man-made canals and the Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway meander through the county.

Spread throughout the county are four National Wildlife Refuges, four State Game Lands, and a National Seashore abounding in natural beauty, flora and fauna.

Once renown as the "Canada Goose Hunting Capital of the World", Lake Mattamuskeet attracts many migrating waterfowl each year, providing ample seasonal hunting opportunities.

Anglers are attracted to the county for both fresh and salt-water fishing. The mainland offers a variety of fish including small-mouth bass, perch, brim, croaker and catfish. Ocracoke Island offers salt-water challenges for the sport fisherman.

Divided into two distinct masses, both mainland Hyde County and Ocracoke Island are steeped in history. Fairfield and Lake

Landing National Register Historic Districts on the mainland, and Ocracoke National Register Historic District on the island are excellent examples of the county's proud heritage. Other sites include Davis School, the old Hyde County Courthouse, Mattamuskeet Lodge, and the Octagon House.

Since the beginning, small-family oriented communities have farmed the rich black peat soil and harvested the bountiful waters of the Pamlico Sound. In recent years, Ocracoke, accessed only by boat or by air, has become a favorite tourist destination. The County Government, various Departments of the State of NC, an egg farm, and a nationally owned bank employs the majority of the workforce. Seasonal positions in the seafood and tourism industry provide additional opportunities for the county's residents.

The way of life in Hyde County is very much laid-back. There are no fast-food eateries, no chain-brand motels, no traffic lights, and no incorporated towns. You'll be greeted by a wave of the hand from passing motorists and welcomed by its people willing to share their little piece of heaven for a day or for eternity.

COUNTY GOVERNMENT

Hyde County is governed by a five-member Board of Commissioners who bear the responsibility of serving the people and improving the quality of life in the county. The county is divided into five townships (Currituck, Fairfield, Lake Landing, Ocracoke, and Swan Quarter) with one commissioner elected from each township. Terms on the board are staggered with elections held every two years. A County Manager, hired by the Commissioners, acts on their behalf. The Board meets on the first Monday of each month in the Hyde County Government Center, 30 Oyster Creek Road, Swan Quarter.

The Cleark of Court, the Register of Deeds, and the Sheriff are elected every four years. The Clerk of Court is custodian of the court system in the county and that office is financed completely by the State of NC. The Register of Deeds and the Sheriff operate on a budget approved annually by the Commissioners.

The Board of Education is responsible for the operation of the county school system and is also elected at-large by the people. County funds pay for maintenance and operation of the buildings, grounds and equipment, these funds also support athletics, and special projects while state funds pay the majority of salaries, purchasing textbooks, and supplies. The Hyde County Board of Education is composed of five elected members and meets on a regularly scheduled basis at the O. A. Peay Complex in Swan Quarter and other locations around the county.

The Health Department and the Department of Social Services have separate boards that are appointed by the commissioners. Hiring of employees in these department is approved by the commissioners with state personnel policies applying.

The "Swan Quarterly Magazine" was published locally by former Hyde County resident Ingrid Lemme beginning in 2008. In 2010 Ingrid added the Swan Quarterly Facebook page. When she moved away in 2012, it was taken over by another Hyde County resident and has continually been published daily since that time.

Follow us on Facebook & learn about all things Hyde County! We try to keep both Mainland Hyde County and Ocracoke Island abreast of the latest news in the county .

Have something related to the county that you'd like to share with others? Let us know by messaging us on Facebook. We'll be glad to share your news with others.

22 copies of Ingrid's original magazines are available on line at UNC-Chapel Hill's Digital Collections Repository:

HYDE
COUNTY SCHOOLS

Ocracoke School is unlike anywhere else in the world, and so is the education we offer. As a fully integrated K through 12 school on a barrier island, Ocracoke provides a personalized learning experience that is both rigorous and deeply human. Small class sizes allow students to thrive academically while developing confidence, independence, and a strong sense of responsibility. Our island setting becomes a living classroom, where marine science, history, and environmental stewardship are woven into daily learning. Ocracoke graduates leave with a global perspective rooted in a close-knit community.

Mattamuskeet School is the heart of learning on the mainland, where tradition and innovation grow side by side. Our students learn in an environment that honors the land, the water, and the people who call this place home. With strong academic foundations, career-connected learning, and authentic community partnerships, Mattamuskeet prepares students not just to graduate, but to lead. Classrooms extend beyond four walls into wetlands, farms, and local industries, giving students hands on experiences that connect learning to life. This is a school where resilience is taught, curiosity is nurtured, and pride runs deep.

Hyde Academy is a place where ambition is met with opportunity, and students are trusted with real responsibility for their future. Designed for learners who are ready to accelerate or chart a purposeful path forward, Hyde Academy offers students the chance to earn high school credits alongside college coursework in a supportive, personalized environment. This early college model opens doors to higher education while reducing financial barriers and building confidence long before graduation.

Hyde County Schools is where purpose meets possibility. Tucked between open water and open skies, our schools serve as anchors for community, opportunity, and hope. We are small by design and bold by intention, offering students something increasingly rare in education: deep relationships, real-world learning, and a future shaped with care. In Hyde County, every child is known, every voice matters, and every path forward is valued.
