IMPORTANT INFO:

Dear FMIS Families and Community,

Spring is quickly approaching, and we kindly ask for your support in reinforcing our HISS expectations at home. Your partnership helps our students stay focused, respectful, and ready to learn each day. As the weather continues to shift, please keep sending students with layers so they stay warm during cool mornings.

Thank you for your continued support!

Science of Reading Focus

COMPREHENSION

Activating Background Knowledge

Successful readers understand texts better by connecting what they read to their own knowledge and experiences. When students think about what they already know or have experienced, it helps them make sense of new words and ideas. Talking with your child about stories, asking questions, and connecting reading to real-life experiences can strengthen their understanding and comprehension.

Predicting

Predicting is an important reading strategy where students use clues from the story and what they already know to guess what might happen next. Making predictions helps students stay engaged and think more deeply about characters and events. You can support this at home by asking your child questions like, "What do you think will happen next?" while reading together.

Asking Questions

Asking questions while reading helps children think more deeply and better understand what they read. At home, you can support this by modeling curiosity and inviting your child to ask their own questions about the story. Treating reading like a conversation helps build strong comprehension and a love of books.

Retelling

Retelling a story helps children understand and remember what they read by putting events and details into their own words. You can support this at home by asking your child to share what happened in the story and who the main characters were. Taking turns retelling or looking back at the book and pictures can help build confidence and comprehension.
