November's School Counseling Lesson Topic

November's counseling lessons will focus on accountablity.

Accountability follows our October's word, ownership. Accountability is a positive approach to repair trust with others and improve oneself in future situations.

During the classroom guidance lessons, students will explore "what if" scenarios and discuss how would they work through those conflicts. From the classroom lessons, students will practice applying ownership and accountability steps to take personal responsibility to identify their role in the conflict, problem solve to repair their part in the conflict and grow from hypothetical learning situations in a positive way.

Accountability allows students to become more skilled in decision making skills to problem solve through situations they face in their everyday life. It is a lifelong journey of learning to become a better version of themselves through their experiences.
