Mrs. McCoy

About Me:

This year begins my fifth year as an elementary special education teacher. My husband, Chad, and I have been married 31 years, and we have two children, Hannah, 22, who is a wedding photographer, and Jake, 16, who loves gaming and anime. When I am not teaching or working on my doctorate, I enjoy traveling, reading, anime, completing puzzles, and building LEGO sets. I am usually planning, organizing, or creating something, whether it is for my classroom, my family, or just for fun. I love learning new things, making memories with my family, and finding reasons to celebrate life's everyday moments.

My Favorites:

Snacks: mixed nuts, cheese, sea salt carmel milk chocolate, baby ruth bars
Drink: Cool Blue Gatorade, Sprite, A&W Rootbeer
Food: any - love it all
Dessert: cinnamon rolls, pazookies, lemon anything (bars, pie, cake)
Season: fall & spring
Team: Astros, Thunder
Color: Reds, Blues, Greens
Authors: Stephen King, Neal Shusterman, Marie Lu, YA Fiction, Historical Fiction
Movies: To many to choose- I like thrillers
Animal: dogs & cats
Flower: allergic unless they are Lego flowers

My why for being in education:

My "why" is to help every student feel seen, valued, and capable of learning. I can teach the ABCs and 123s, but building students' confidence in who they are and what they are capable of is the most important thing I teach. Every child deserves meaningful opportunities to grow, communicate, build independence, and experience success. I strive to create a safe, supportive classroom where differences are celebrated, every accomplishment matters, and students learn to believe in themselves.
