Aaron Reynolds	Jasper Rabbit, protagonist of the picture book Creepy Carrots! and its sequels (most recently Creepy Crayon!, rev. 9/22), serves as the Rod Serling–like narrator of this early-chapter-book series opener. "Creepy things lie on the following pages . . . You may possibly find yourself peeing your pants." Duly warned, readers meet Charlie Marmot, who is scheduled to have his tonsils removed and plans to keep them in a jar for show-and-tell. But when the time comes for the procedure, the tonsils are a From the September/October 2025 issue of The Horn Book Magazine. What terrors lurk within your mouth? Jasper Rabbit knows. "You have stumbled your way into the unknown." The young bunny introduced in Reynolds and Brown's Caldecott Honor–winning picture book, Creepy Carrots (2012), takes up Rod Serling's mantle, and the fit is perfect. Mimicking an episode of The Twilight Zone, the book follows Charlie Marmot, an average kid with a penchant for the strange and unusual. He's pleased when his tonsils become infected; maybe once they're out he can take them to school for show and tell! That's when bizarre Kirkus Reviews Issue: July 1, 2025

What to do? Then he comes up with the perfect solution—a traveling library! He buys two donkeys—Alfa and Beto—and travels with them throughout the land, bringing books and reading to the children in faraway villages. Beautiful! Complete with an author's note about the real man on whom this story is based. Source- Goodreads Winter (Nasreen's Secret School) again roots a heartening and informative story in real life. Festive acrylic paintings transport readers to the lush Colombian jungle, where the wife of an avid reader grumbles that his extensive book collection is cluttering their house ("What are we going to do, eat books with our rice?"). To solve the problem, Luis builds crates and packs them with books that he delivers—burro—to adults and children in remote parts of the country. During a trip to El Tormento,

LVPS	978-0-593-32420-2	Go Forth and Tell: The Life of Augusta Baker,	Janina Edwards, Breanna J. McDaniel	Growing up in Baltimore, Maryland, Augusta Braxton Baker eagerly listened to her grandmot tales of Br'er Rabbit and King Arthur, becoming aware that heroes often use their smarts to j out of trouble. She used this lesson throughout her life, attending teacher's college in New Y honing her skills as a storyteller, and becoming a children's librarian at the 135th Street bran the New York Public Library in Harlem. There she worked to right the wrongs that she saw, t locate positive stories featuring African Americans, and to encourage and inspire her patron young and old, who included James Baldwin, Audre Lorde, Carter Woodson, Virginia Hamilto and Walter Dean Myers. Brimming with color and texture, Harrison's illustrations incorporat acrylics, pen, and mixed-media collage elements that bestow a pleasing three-dimensional l to the scenes. Some of the most effective illustrations portray emotions: children listening to tales, rapt with attention; Baker's horror at some of the racist titles she found on the library shelves; and her kind but firm demeanor with Bert and Ernie when appearing on Sesame Str Appended with a time line, sources, and author's note, this makes a worthy addition to libra collections; pair with Anika Aldamuy Denise's picture-book biography on Pura Belpré, Planti

Suzanne Lang	This early graphic novel chapter book based on the #1 New York Times bestselling Grumpy Monkey is perfect for children who love the original picture books and are ready for the next step. A longer storyline, multiple panels per page, and hilarious dialogue will keep kids laughing all the way to the end, when Jim Panzee learns an important lesson about apologies. Jim Panzee is demonstrating a new magic trick when he's interrupted by two owpeckers cooing over each other. Annoyed, he tosses a banana peel from his branch and, even worse, denies doing it! Now the real trouble begins when Jim Panzee is banished from the jungle. Best friend Norman joins him and they end up in the desert. But the desert isn't a happy place for them, especially Norman. Too much heat in the daytime, too much cold at night, and the lack of bananas are big problems. In order to help his best buddy, Jim agrees to return to the jungle. But the only way he will be welcomed back is if he apologizes. Will grumpy monkey Jim be able to do that? ~Goodreads

LVPS	978-1-63198-590-4	Jayden's Impossible Garden	Melina Mangal	Jayden and a new friend bring nature to the city in this timeless story about a community garden Amidst all the buildings, people, and traffic in his neighborhood, Jayden sees nature everywhere: the squirrels scrounging, the cardinals calling, and the dandelions growing. But Mama doesn't believe there's nature in the city. So Jayden sets out to help Mama see what he sees. With the help of his friend Mr. Curtis, Jayden plants the seeds of a community garden and brings together his neighbors—and Mama—to show them the magic of nature in the middle of the city. Timeless and vibrant, this story highlights the beauty of intergenerational relationships and the power of imagination and perseverance in bringing the vision of a community garden to life. Jayden's love of nature will inspire readers to see their environment and surroundings as bursting with opportunities for growth and connection. At the back of the book, readers will find activities to make items found in the book, such as the milk jug bird feeder. Jayden's Impossible Garden is the winner of the 2019 African American Voices in Children's Literature writing contest, cosponsored by Strive Publishing and Free Spirit Publishing, and the recipient of the 2021 Foreword INDIES Honorable Mention, Picture Books, Early Reader (Children's). ~ Goodreads

From social-emotional learning expert Trudy Ludwig and award-winning illustrator Patrice Barton, this tale of courage and compassion will embolden readers to face their own fears. "A sweet and powerful gem of a book sure to help young worriers." -Dawn Huebner, PhD, author of What to Do When You Worry Too Much ~ Goodreads
LVPS	9780593615669	Are You Mad at Me?	Tyler Feder	A very nervous ostrich pushes past her anxiety in this funny, endearing picture book by the author/illustrator of Bodies Are Cool (co-written with her sister). When Opal the ostrich is anxious, her neck feels as wobbly as a spaghetti noodle. Her family lovingly calls this "The Noodles," and tries their best to help. But it's not easy to calm down when you're a worrier like Opal—especially when you're worrying about somebody else's opinion of you. Now it's the day of her family's annual party, and Opal is in charge of picking up the triple-layer-double-custard-beet-and-berry tart from the bakery—a big responsibility! What if she does something wrong? What if somebody gets mad at her? Opal is having a serious case of the Noodles. This light-hearted take on social anxiety is just the right amount silly and sweet—perfect for young children and anyone else who has ever gotten The Noodles ~ Goodreads
LVPS	9798889834069	The Boy with Big, Big Energy	Britney Winn Lee	From the creators of The Boy with Big, Big Feelings comes a new story about a boy who's bursting with energy--moving, talking, bubbling excitement--and how he learns to channel it for good. This is a story about a boy with so much energy, he struggles to contain it. He's bouncing off the walls--during school, at museums, while playing with friends. Everywhere he goes, he's moving, laughing, fidgeting, and climbing--and he always has something to say. In some places, he's supposed to be quiet and still, but that's HARD! What's a boy with so much energy to do? Beautifully illustrated and written in rhyming verse, The Boy with Big, Big Energy explores how energetic, active kids can find healthy outlets. With the help of his patient dad, the boy learns how to focus his energy in the appropriate time and place by trying new sports and calm-down techniques. The boy discovers how his unique gifts equip him to leap into action when his friends need him most. There are lots of ways his big energy can shine! Perfect for high-energy children, kids with ADHD, big talkers, and anyone who is constantly on the move. ~Goodreads
