School Site Council (SSC): What It Is and Why It Matters

The School Site Council (SSC) is a collaborative team made up of parents, staff members, and school leadership who work together to support student achievement and school improvement. SSC members review school data, provide input on school goals, and help guide important decisions regarding programs and funding that directly impact students.

At Title I schools, the SSC plays a key role in reviewing and approving the School Plan for Student Achievement (SPSA), Title I funding priorities, and other initiatives designed to improve student outcomes. The council serves as a voice for the school community and helps ensure that decisions reflect the needs of students, families, and staff.

Why SSC Matters:

When families and educators come together to make decisions, schools become stronger. The School Site Council provides an opportunity for stakeholders to participate in meaningful discussions about student learning, school culture, and continuous improvement. By bringing diverse perspectives to the table, SSC helps ensure that resources are used effectively and that every student has the support needed to succeed. In short: SSC is where partnership becomes action, helping shape the future of our school and ensuring that all students have the opportunity to thrive. For Friendly Hills, you could close with: "At Friendly Hills, we believe our greatest strength is the collective wisdom of our families, staff, and community. The School Site Council allows us to work together with purpose, keeping students at the center of every decision we make." In attendance: Yahaira Familia, Kali Niemann, Jenny Morrison, Terri Fowler, Margaret Cowan, Lisa Roach and Stephanie Dashiell.
