WHAT ARE WE LEARNING?

Our third graders have been working hard as we wrap up the school year! Students have been completing their end-of-year reading and math benchmark assessments. We are proud of the effort they have shown and are excited to celebrate their growth.

In reading, students have been learning about government and how communities, states, and our country are organized. They have explored the roles of leaders and the responsibilities of citizens.

In math, students recently worked with area models to solve multiplication problems and are now learning about fractions of a set. Students are identifying equal groups and determining what fraction of a collection belongs to a given category.
