Learn to be the quietest person in the room, and seek opportunities to make a difference in others's lives. Ecach day is a chance to learn. Always be humble and grateful and show respect in every situation.

When asked what advice he would give to the younger generation, he listed 5 key points. Number one: Obtain some form of education. Two: Work hard and remember if it was easy, everyone would do it. Three: Strive to learn something new everyday. Four: Seek out successful people in your community, engage with them and learn from their experiences. Five: Give back to your community in some form or fashion because there is no greater feeling in life.

That lesson is that relationships with co-workers are more important than the paycheck. Working together for the overall good advances everyone on the team much further than one person alone.

Looking back over her career and thinking about any advice that she would give the younger generation, Mrs. Vincent stated the following - work hard to achieve your goals but don't be afraid to change course if your heart recognizes a need. Also, don't neglect family time and relationships with co-workers.
