Due to emotionally heavy content, this film is recommended for adults and children Grade 7 and up. A book and craft option led by Civil Rights Team members will be available for younger children. Soup will be served for the meal.

For decades, child welfare authorities removed Indigenous children from their homes to “save them from being Indian.” In the place now called Maine, the first official Truth and Reconciliation Commission began a historic investigation. Dawnland goes behind the scenes, as this historic body grapples with difficult truths, redefines reconciliation, and charts a new course for state and tribal relations.
