In appreciation of his sincere efforts, helpful manner, and cooperative spirit, we,
the Class of 1936,
respectfully dedicate this issue of the Trident to IRVING T. DOYLE
loyal citizen and friend.

We hope that this number of the Trident will meet with the approval of our supporters, advertisers and purchasers. How near to, or how far below, our aim, we have fallen is left for you to decide. We only ask that you be generous. We are sure that you will admit we have the right spirit—we have tried.

Awake! Awake!

Undergraduates! Have you ever considered having a student council in Brewer High School? The Class of '36 has seriously contemplated it at times, but evidently lacked the intuition to perpetrate such an undertaking. Are you, too, going to overlook the opportunity to improve your school and your own interests? Other schools of Brewer's calibre have student councils, so why shouldn't we?

Perhaps a word concerning the organization and functions of a council would help to arouse more interest. At the beginning of each school year, part of the student body consisting principally of class officers, athletic managers, and one or two representatives from each home room, organizes into a student council with its officers, by-laws, and other codes of authority. Usually there is a faculty adviser, and, usually, too, the principal of the school, while he has no active part in the proceedings of the council meetings, has the power of vetoing any law or resolution made by the students. As to the duties of the council, they may be few and limited, or, many and of great scope, depending upon the cooperation of council and principal. As suggestions, the council could: regulate and relieve congested traffic in the corridors; grant charters to the various school organizations and clubs; make rules governing students' conduct on school property; establish a uniform set of study hall rules; to try and to punish the violators of all rules of discipline; act as a mediator between principal and students if an occasion of dispute should arise; and, most important of all, try to stop the petty thieving which still continues, despite all attempts to curb it.

Why can't WE have a student council—a representative government? Our forefathers fought for the right to govern themselves and eventually they succeeded. Soon, when we are catapulted into the world, we will be expected to carry on the management of our communities and nation. Why can't we have preparation now for our great assignment? Why can't we commence now to study the fundamentals of democracy by having a representative government in our schools? We—the class of 1936—can't now; it's too late; but you—the undergraduates of Brewer High—can, if you will.

The Editor.

HISTORY OF THE CLASS OF 1936

Our class entered Brewer High School on September 11, 1932 with about 135 pupils registering as Freshmen. During the first week of school, Mr. Gordon, the principal, called us together in the assembly hall to elect our class officers. We chose Lee Philbrook for President, Howard Kenny as Vice-President, Clayton Hobbs for Secretary, and Spofford Avery for Treasurer.

The next year was one of great achievements for the class of '36." The first thing of importance which took place was our class election. Howard Kenny was re-elected as president, Clayton Hobbs as vice president, Spofford Avery as treasurer, and Lucille Maddocks as secretary. At this point there was an obstacle to be overcome in the form of class debts which were incurred during our Freshman year.

But as usual, our very capable and efficient class officers obtained the money to pay this debt from a social held by our class to which we invited the Juniors.

The next thing of importance was the opening of the football season. Our class was well represented on the team by: Lawrence Campbell, John Gass, Howard Kenny, Fred Mullins, Lee Philbrook, Earl Robertson, James Seely, Spofford Avery, Harold Swett, and Charles Wyman.

After a good season . . . "Wait a minute, I think I have left out one of our football stars. To be sure, it's that happy-go-lucky, gentleman of fortune, Charlie Barry."

After a successful football season, Coach Dogherty called for basketball material. The Sophomore class was represented on the varsity squad by two boys and one girl, Howard Kenny, Lee Philbrook and Lucille Maddocks.

Soon the baseball season began with the following boys representing the class on the diamond: Carl Browning, Stuart Gerry, Howard Kenny, and Charles Wyman.

John Dalton was the outstanding runner for the season on the track team.

There existed in our class a few students of superior intelligence. They were: Spofford Avery, Virginia Barstow, Hildreth Billings, Gordon Carter, Leonard Clough, Elizabeth Cole, Helen Gray, Clayton Hobbs, Lucille Maddocks, Lucille Matthews, Helen McDonald, Mildred Robertson, and Thelma West.

The Orchestra played an important part in the school assemblies and at social affairs of the High School. The members of our class playing in the Orchestra are: Spofford Avery, Gordon Carter, Stuart Gerry, William Laliberte, Robert McKeen, Elsie Peters, Patricia Smith, Thelma West, and Charles Wyman.

The Band, as well as the Orchestra, played an important part in school activities. The members of our class in the Band are: Robert McKeen, Spofford Avery, Gordon Carter, Stuart Gerry, and Charles Wyman.

At last it was time to take leave of our studies for a few months, but again in September we returned as Juniors with 105 of us registering.

Elections again! This time we re-elected Howard Kenny as president, Clayton Hobbs as vice president, Spofford Avery as treasurer, and Lucille Maddocks as secretary.

We also chose a committee consisting of our class officers: Lillian Moore, Lucille Matthews, Charles Wyman, Stuart Gerry and Gordon Carter, to select our class rings.

Now came the big event of our Junior year, the annual Junior Speaking Exhibition. After three preliminary rounds those selected for the finals were as follows: Girls—Lucille Matthews, Lillian Moore, Mildred Robertson, Patricia Smith, Thelma West, and Lucille Maddocks (alternate). Boys—Charles Barry, Gordon Bolster, Leonard Clough, Stuart Gerry, William Laliberte, and Gordon Carter (alternate).

The representatives to the University of Maine Speaking Contest were: William Laliberte, Lillian Moore, and Patricia Smith.

Our Junior year is drawing to a close, but before we leave, the honor roll appears. The following Junior names appear on it: Virginia Barstow, Donald Byers, Gordon Carter, Leonard Clough, Elizabeth Cole, Joseph Dowling, Bernard Gormely, Evangeline Mathews, Marion Morrison, Carolyn Quimby, and Thelma West.

After a special election, Gerald D'Amboise was chosen our class marshal.

On September 12, 1935, about ninety-three of us returned as Seniors. We were elated at having reached the coveted goal for which we had been striving for three long years. Our class elections were held and we chose John Gormely for president, Clayton Hobbs for vice president, Marion Morrison as secretary and Spofford Avery as treasurer.

As the fall season came on, we became interested in football. The Senior class was well represented on the football squad and the team came with a good record.

About this time Mr. Jones called for candidates for the Debating Union. From his group he picked out a squad of twelve members. The Senior members on this squad who did excellent work during the season were: Leonard Clough, William Laliberte, and Lillian Moore.

Under the able direction of Miss Wray, our class adviser, the Dramatics Club presented a number of plays which were much enjoyed by the persons attending. The Dramatics Club in the future should be a very active organization in Brewer High School.

Basketball also took its place in the annals of sport in Brewer High. The following Seniors received their letters: Boys—John Gormely, Howard Kenny, Lee Philbrook, John Dalton, Gordon Carter, Elwin Chute. Girls—Mary Lunt, Virginia Avery, Lucille Maddocks.

During the year a great many socials and class dances were held which were enjoyed by all the students who attended.

As June was drawing near, Mr. Gordon announced the graduation speakers to be: Leonard Clough, Valedictorian; Virginia Barstow, Salutatorian.

The honor essayists were: Spofford Avery, Elizabeth Cole, Lucille Maddocks, and Thelma West.

We are proud to announce that the five Juniors who were selected last year at the Senior assembly for the National Honor Society were: Spofford Avery, Virginia Barstow, Gordon Carter, Leonard Clough, and Lucille Maddocks.

Our class day speakers who were chosen by our class officers are as follows: Address to Undergraduates, John Gormely; Class History, Lucille Matthews and Lillian Moore; Class Prophecy, William Laliberte, Geraldine Williams, Myrtle McLeod, James Seeley; Class Will, Gordon Bolster; Class Gifts, Stuart Gerry, Fred Mullins, Marion Morrison, Lillian Moore; Gift to School, Charles Barry.

G. H. Bolster, '36.

Oh! what a girl,
 Always on the go,
 She keeps things in a whirl,
 Even poor Asa thinks so.

Brooks, Orville James "Bobo"
 Traffic Officer (3).

He comes from South Brewer
 And is usually well behaved,
 Except on some occasions
 When he fights along the way.

Browning, Carl Vincent "Brownie"
 Football (3-4); Baseball (3); Traffic Officer
 (3-4); Varsity Club.

Browning drives a Ford V-8,
 And stops outside of Marj's gate;
 He toots and blows the horn in vain,
 'Cause Marj has got a beau from Maine.

Buchanan, Pearley Albert "Jose"
 Cross Country (2); Football (3).

Pearley's shy, but handsome,
 So think the girls in vain,
 But Pearley says there's only one,
 We wish we knew her name.

This boy is a real athlete,
And to watch him play is a treat,
But we know he's lost his stand
Because he's under Helen's command.

Church, Marjorie Lillian "Mergie"
Office Girl (3-4); Junior Speaking (Semi-Finals); Trident Board (4); Dramatics Club (4); Traffic Officer (3); Debating Union (4).

All the boys like Marj,
But she doesn't like them
Because she has a guy
From the U. of M.

Bangor High (1); Higgins Classical Institute (1); Baseball (2-3-4); Basketball (1-4); Interclass Basketball (3); Wearer of "B"; Traffic Officer (4); Cross Country (1); Wearer of "H"; Varsity Club.

Charlie could be clever
If he'd do more thinking
Instead of playing the game of hearts
And with all the girls winking.

Clark, Harriet Lillian "Harriet"
Motto Committee (4).

Here is to Harriet,
Whom everyone should meet,
For to know her is to love her,
This little girl so sweet.

Clewley, Russell Jordan "Russ"
Clewley comes from the country,
He's usually here rain or shine;
If you'd like to know him better
Visit him on the farm sometime.

Clough, Leonard George "Cluffy"
Trident Board (4); Financial Manager, Athletics (4); Graduation Speaker; Valedictorian; Junior Speaking (Finals); X. E. "And still they gazed,
And still the wonder grew
That one small head
Could carry all he knew."

Goldsmith.

Cole, Elizabeth Sara "Betty"
Se'Beowulf (4); Ring Committee (3); Honor Student; Graduation Speaker; Junior Speaking (Semi-Finals); Radio Play (4).

Eyes that are as black as Mid-Night,
Hair of a similar hue;
We think you're a heart smasher,
Many conquests we hope for you.

Connor, Evelyn Anne "Ev"
Triple H Club (1).

For five short years
Evelyn's had a beau,
We know she makes Dick happy
But how about his Pappy?

Costain, Thelma Mable "Thelma"
Triple H Club (1-2-3-4).

Thelma is tall and slender,
And moves with a queenly grace;
She's a jolly all round pal
And fits in any place.

Crook, Virgil Burnham "Crook"
Traffic Officer (4); Junior Speaking (Semi-Finals).

Virgil's weakness is parties
Where he often stays late,
And if he isn't home at one,
The rest, isn't for us to state.

Dalton, George William "Georgie"
Football (3-4); Hi-Y (4); Traffic Officer (3-4); Wearer of "B"; Varsity Club.

On the football field is where he shines,
And has performed a feat many times,
But to Frances he's always the same
Regardless of his football glory and fame.

D'Amboise, Gerald Alfred "Jerry", "Danny"
Baseball (1-2-3-4); Football (3-4); Cross Country (1); Radio Play (4); Class Basketball (3); Class Marshal; Junior Speaking (Semi-Finals); Traffic Officer (3-4); Varsity Club.

Jerry is very happy
When he goes to ride
For out in the open spaces
With Thelma by his side.

Dorr, Beatrice Edna "B"
Se'Beowulf (4); Traffic Officer (4).

Always willing to lend a helping hand
Does her studying first
She has a smile that is just grand
So here's success Bea, as a nurse.

Dougherty, Mary Elizabeth "Liz"
Intramural Basketball (4); Triple H Club (1-2-3); Traffic Officer (2).

Always laughing and full of fun,
But never known to be on time;
She has a crowd all her own,
And the best pal one could find.

Dowling, Joseph Hartley "Joe"
Traffic Officer (3-4).

He lives in Brewer and goes to Brewer High
But we think he finds Gardiner supreme;
He likes football it's easy to see
Tho he never went out for the team.

Drew, Myrtle Dora "Myrt"
Office Girl (3-4).

Except when "Red" is around
Myrtle can't be heard;
But to say she can't sew,
Why, that would be absurd.

Dyer, Eleanor Dorothy
Triple H Club (1-2-3-4); Traffic Officer (3);
Intramural Basketball (3).
Eleanor is slender and not very tall
She doesn't care for books at all;
She'd rather go to a dance any time
Then listen to George sing his nursery rhyme.

Eddy, Florence Ruth "Fefe"
Traffic Officer (4).

A smile, a hearty greeting
Comes from Florence, petite;
She'll be a friend to you
Where and whenever you meet.

Fickett, Bernice Meredith "Ber"
Triple H Club (3-4); Office Girl (3-4); Dramatics Club (4); Se'bcowulf (4); Librarian (4).

Bunny haunts the library
Can it be the books,
Or is it the boy over in the corner
With those stunning looks.

Gass, Harold
Traffic Officer (4).

H is for Harry
With pretty red hair,
You often see him tarry
With the "femmes" so fair.

Gerry, Stuart Walker "Gerry"
Band (2-3-4); Hi-Y (4); Contest Play (4); Baseball (2-3-4); Junior Speaking (Semi-Finals); Trident Board (4); Ring Committee
(3); Dramatics Club (4); Varsity Club.

Stuart comes to school each day
With a little girl named Lucille,
And if she happens to go away
He's like a wagon without a wheel.

Goggin, Gertrude Alice "Gert"
Office Girl (3-4); Interclass Basketball (2-4);
Junior Speaking (Semi-Finals); Motto Committee (4).

Gert usually smiles from ear to ear
Every time a boy draws near,
But "Tiger" is the one and only boy
Who fills her heart full of joy.

Gormley, Michael Bernard "Bud"
Honor Student; Traffic Officer (4); Chester
(1-2).

Bernard is a studious lad
He never acts good, nor does he act bad
He's always jolly and full of fun
And don't give a heck for anyone.

Gormley, John Edward "Johnie", "Jim"
Class President (4); Chester (1-2); Football
(3-4); Basketball (3-4); Baseball (3-4); Intramural Basketball (3); Junior Speaking
(Semi-Finals); Dramatics Club (4); Radio
Play (4); Trident Board (4); Class Day
Speaker; Manager, Football Social (4); Varsity Club (4); Wearer of "B"; Locker Room
Attendant (4); Traffic Officer (4); Varsity Club.

Here is our fullback,
Who's everybody's pal,
And though we don't know,
We think he's feeling low,
Because he's lost his gal.

Gould, Catherine Marie "K"
Trident Board (4); Se'Beowulf (4); Office Girl (3-4).

Kay is quiet and dignified
She never makes any noise
She doesn't let her lessons ride
'Cause she doesn't go out with the boys.

Grant, Clayton Fremont "Grantie"
Traffic Officer (3).

Grant would be good
In advertising gum,
Because he chews it every day
And then some!

Hennessey, Louis Daniel "Louis"
Honor Student; Traffic Officer (3-4).

Hail, to the shyest lad in our class
He seems to care for not any lass
He always has his work just so
And in his car he's usually on the go.

Hobbs, Clayton Bailey "Hobbsie", "Skeet"
Class Secretary (1); Vice President (Class) (2-3-4); Intramural Basketball (4); Vice President, Hi-Y (4); Radio Play (4); Trident Board (4); Traffic Officer (3-4).

Clayton runs around in his Jewett
And drives up from Orrington,
Although he likes to go to dances,
He always has his work well done.

Hodgins, Mary Florence "Flo"
Triple H Club (3); Intramural Basketball (4).

Flo is a good scout in every way
She likes to work, but would rather play
So every night at half past eight
She's over at the ball-room gate.

Hyson, Mary Katherine "Kitty"
Cheer Leader (4); Triple H Club (3).

Kay knows all and sees all,
She's very quick and alert,
She makes the boys fall,
For they say she's a flirt.

Ivers, Gladys May "Gladdy"
Office Girl (3-4); Cheer Leader (3-4); Debating Club (4); Triple H Club (4); Trident Board (4); Basketball (3-4); Intramural Basketball (4); Wearer of "B."

Gladys is very impish
With a twinkle in her eye
She likes sports and dancing
We are wondering why.

Jellison, Donald Kilby "Don"

He isn't brilliant in History,
But who could blame him, anyway,
We know it's hard to study,
But he'll succeed some day.

Jordan, Hester

Triple H Club (2-3-4).

Just mention a dance to Hester
And she's already to go
For with those dancing feet
She'd rather dance than eat.

Kenney, Howard Fremont"Flash"

Football (2-3); Captain of Football (4); Basketball (2-3-4); Baseball (1-2-3-4); Class President (2-3); Class Vice President (1); Traffic Officer (3-4); Intramural Basketball (2-3-4); Varsity Club.

"Flash" is an all 'round star,
Captain of our team,
And when he races down the field
You'd think he was run by steam.

Laliberte, William Gordon"Bill"

Intramural Basketball (4); Orchestra (1-2-3-4); Debating Squad (4); Junior Speaking (Finals); X. E. Club (Vice President) (3-4); Dramatics Club (4); Traffic Officer (3); Football Social Play (4); Trident Board (4); Class Day Speaker; Delegate to U. of M. Speaking Contest (3); Radio Play (4).

William has many strings
Besides those on his violin,
At practice he does his best,
And then finds time for West.

Lindsay, Alfred Carlos"Lindy"

Traffic Officer (3); Junior Speaking (Semi-Finals).

The girls are always bothering
This boy with blond and curly hair,
He has quite a unique beauty,
A trait which we think is quite rare.

Lord, Hazel Edna"Lordy"

Orchestra (1).

Hazel wears a diamond on her finger
She's to be married quite soon
And so she must not linger,
But hurry from school with a boom!

Lunt, Mary Geraldine"Beans"

Triple H Club (3-4); Wearer of "B"; Trident Board (4); Interclass Basketball (3-4); Basketball (4); Delegate to Maine Play Day (4).

Mary is our basketball star,
She's very tall and dark,
She's always happy when out
With Charlie on a lark.

Lynk, Jessie Isabelle"Jessie"

Se'Beowulf (3-4); Triple H Club (1-2-3-4); Dramatics Club (4); Junior Speaking (Semi-Finals); Banquet Committee (4); Class Color Committee (3).

There's a serious side to this girl too
Although she is always far from blue
She's sure to be a good man's wife,
So she's headed for a happy life.

MacLeod, Myrtle Ardelle"Mud"

Assistant Manager, Basketball (3); Manager, Basketball (4); Triple H Club (2-4); Se'-Beowulf (3-4); Trident Board (4); Delegate to Maine Play Day; Junior Speaking (Semi-Finals); Class Day Speaker; Wearer of "B." "Mud" has been a good basketball manager, And always keeps up to its style, She's usually seen with her side-kick Jeddie, And in swimming she doesn't stop at a mile.

Maddocks, Asenath Lucille "Luce"
Class Secretary (2-3); Trident Board (4); Basketball (2-3-4); Dramatics Club (4); Wearer of "B"; X. E. Club (3-4); National Honor Society; Honor Student; Junior Speaking (Alternate); Ring Committee (3); Cheer Leader (3-4); Graduation Speaker; Football Social Play (4); Librarian (3); Office Girl (3); Delegate to Maine Play Day; Class Color Committee (3); Triple H Club (3-4); Radio Play (4).

Lucille is the team's star guard
And when she hits, she hits them hard;
We know she's very fond of Maine
But to ask her why, is all in vain.

Mathews, Lucille Angove "Luce"
Dramatics Club (4); Se'Beowulf (Vice President) (4); Junior Speaking (Finals); X. E. Club (3-4); Trident Board (4); Ring Committee (3); Class Day Speaker; Assistant Manager, Basketball (3); Triple H Club (3-4); Traffic Officer (4); Contest Play (4); Football Social Play (4).

Lucille has a shadow
Oh! so big and tall,
He follows her to and fro,
Never beyond her call.

Mathews, Evangeline Annette "E"
Office Girl (4); Trident Board (4); Honor Student.

Riding on the trolley
With whom we do not know
Laughing Oh! so jolly
Guess it is her beau.

McKenna, Valeria Alice "Val"
Val doesn't care much for school
But prefers to sit on the electric car and fool,
She'd rather be in Bangor any time
Because for the boys there doth pine.

Moore, Evelyn Gertrude "Ev"
Class Day Speaker.

Tall and stabby
With a stylish air
Evelyn is liked by all
And has a personality very rare.

Moore, Julia Florence "Judy"
Office Girl (4); Dramatics Club (Secretary and Treasurer) (4); Se'Beowulf (Treasurer); Football Social Play (4); Trident Board (4); Class Color Committee (3).

Happy-go-lucky is she
Ready for sports and fun
A group without our Julie
Is like the earth without the sun.

Moore, Lillian Louise "Lil"
Librarian (3-4); Traffic Officer (4); Debate Squad (4); Ring Committee (3); Junior Speaking (Finals); Delegate to Maine Junior Speaking Contest (3); American Legion Medallist (3); Radio Play (4); Dramatics Club (4); X. E. Club (3-4); Football Social Play (4); Trident Board (4); Class Day Speaker (4); Se'Beowulf (4); Triple H Club (3-4); Lydia Spear Contest (4); Office Girl (4); Intramural Basketball (4).

Lillian, our poetess, is very sweet
And for our Charlie her heart doth beat,
But we know her thoughts are far away
Puerto Rico, for instance let us say.

Morrill, James Walter "Jim"
Here's a boy from South Brewer
Who's as quiet as a mouse
But we wonder if he's really so quiet
When he's in his own house.

Morrison, Marion Jeanette "Pud"
Triple H Club (1-2-3-4); Honor Student;
Class Secretary (4); Trident Board (4);
Se'Beowulf (President); Class Day Speaker;
Office Girl (3-4).

She has a giggle quite her own
For one like it has never been known
We don't think she'll change her name
Because Wendell's still is just the same.

Mullins, Fred Albert "Moon"
Football (2-3-4); Baseball (2-3-4); Radio
Play (4); Intramural Basketball (3-4); Class
Day Speaker; Varsity Club (4); Traffic Officer
(4); Wearer of "B."

Freddy is a good football player
Who takes time out for his waves
But don't worry, Freddy
Maybe Frany will help you some of these days.

Osgood, Louise Ethel "Squeezer"
Triple H Club (3); Trident Board (4); Cheer
Leader (4); Banquet Committee (4); Office
Girl (3); Intramural Basketball (4).

Here's a little girl
Whose typing does excel;
Ne'er a thing will she lose,
Because she does things well.

Philbrook, Lee Roscoe "Tony", "Sank"
Football (2-3-4); Basketball (2-3-4); Baseball (2); Cross Country (3); Class President
(1); Varsity Club.

Lee is "okey-dokey"
With friends galore;
When it comes to sports
Lee has the floor.

Quimby, Carolyn Delle "Carrie"
Honor Student; Dramatics Club (4); Se'Beowulf Club (4); Debate Union (4); Office Girl
(3-4); School Bookkeeper (4); Trident Board
(4); Cashier (3-4).

Quiet, sedate and studious
Eager to win success
And when it comes to classmates
Quimby is one of the best.

Rand, Wilbur Theodore "Will"
Traffic Officer (3).

He walks far out into the country
To visit a maiden there
Why, it's none other than our Betty
With her Cole black hair.

Robertson, Mildred Alice "Milly"
Honor Student; Junior Speaking (Finals);
Debate Union (3); Dramatics Club (4); Football Social Play (4); X. E. Club (3-4).

Some people like to sing
Others like to walk
But with the exception of dancing
Mildred likes to talk.

Royal, Nancy Marion "Nanny"
Office Girl (3-4); Triple H Club (3-4); Intramural Basketball (4).

"Silence" is her motto
For she never makes a sound
She does things as she ought to
The best friend ever found.

Saunders, Hilda Grace
Librarian (4).

"Hilda"

Hilda likes to dress up
And then go to town
She surely gets more boy-friends
Than any girl around.

Seely, James Nelson

"Jim"

Baseball (2-3-4); Cross Country (3); Football (3); Football Reporter (4); Class Day Speaker; Trident Board (4); Varsity Club.

Very somber and gruff
Is this boy with a pleasant smile
He's always humming and fuming
But we know he's happy the while.

Smith, Patricia Mary

"Pat"

Trident Board (4); Football Social Play (4); Contest Play (4); Junior Speaking (Finals); Delegate to Maine Speaking Contest; Traffic Officer (3); Cheer Leader (4); Dramatics Club (4); X. E. Club (3-4); Orchestra (2); Honor Student; Radio Play (4); Assistant Manager, Basketball (3); Triple H Club (3-4); Librarian (3); Secretary of Debating Union (3-4); Stage Committee (4); Book Store (4).

Pat likes a college boy
With whom to dance and twirl
It fills her heart with joy
This same, demure little girl.

Spiller, Avis Lucille

"Spill"

Trident Board (4); Dance Committee (4); Triple H Club (3); Intramural Basketball (4); Junior Speaking (Semi-Finals).

Can you hear those dancing feet
Of our friend Lucille?
She dances hours with Tommy
For it is her heart he did steal.

Stapleford, Grace

"Gracie"

Anson Academy (1-2-3); Junior Speaking (Finals); Nature Club (2); Dramatics Club (1-3).

Grace comes from Anson
And we like her winning ways
There are many honors she has won
And she shall be a star on graduation day.

Sutherland, Marion Helen

"Mally"

Perfect Attendance for Six Years; Triple H Club (3); Librarian (3-4); Intramural Basketball (4).

Marion has a winsome smile
And in school she seems quite mum
But when she's around where the gang is
She surely makes things hum.

Swett, Harold Waldemar

"Swetty"

Football (2-3-4); Baseball (3); Varsity Club.

The girls go for Harold
But he doesn't care
He goes for football
And gives the girls the air.

Verrow, Andrew Joseph

"Andy"

Cross Country (1); Baseball (1-2-3-4); Football (3-4).

Andy's game is baseball
He thinks it is supreme
And we know that this year
Will be the star of the team.

West, Thelma Althea

"Tillie"

Debate Union (3-4); Office Girl (3-4); Junior Speaking (Finals); X. E. Club (3-4); Se'-Beowulf (4); Librarian (4); Orchestra (1-2-3-4); Honor Student; Trident Board (4); Wearer of "B"; Football Social Play (4).

Violets mean Modesty

Roses mean love

But sweet William, to Thelma

Means Heaven above.

Young, Doris Louise

"Dot"

This girl comes from Dedham

Which is far, far away

There are rumors about Dot

Living in Mexico City some day.

Weart, Philip Arnold

"Phil"

Traffic Officer (3); Hi-Y (4).

In arguing too

Philip owes his skill

Even if it's taboo

He argues still.

Williams, Geraldine Franklyn

"Jeddie"

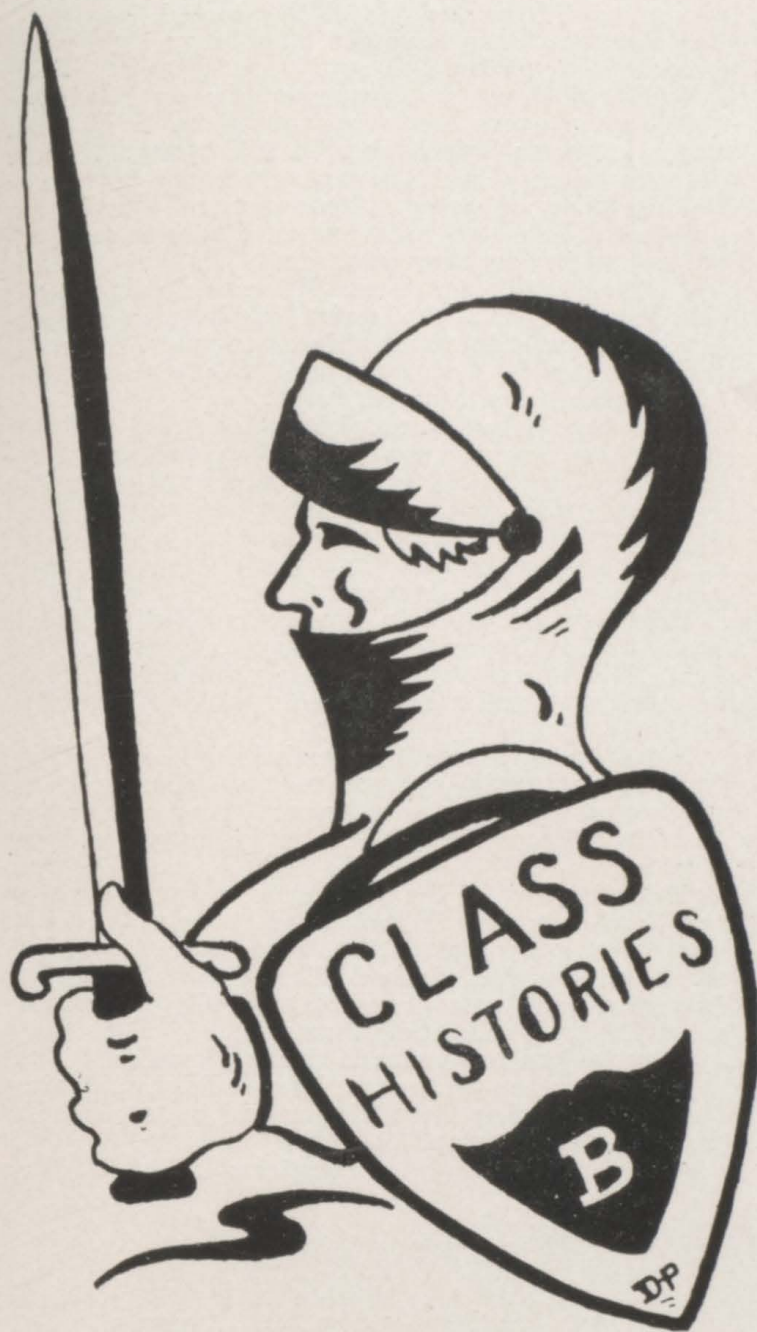

Junior Speaking (Semi-Finals); Dramatics Club (4); Football Social Play (4); Trident Board (3-4); Triple H Club (3-4); Assistant Manager, Basketball (3); Class Day Speaker; Office Girl (2-3).

Jeddie is small in girth

But full of life and mirth

Though she is cold to male advances

She sure puts the boys in trances.

The Class of '37

Scene: A juvenile court room.

Plaintiff: Class of '36 (present Seniors).

Defendant: Class of '37 (present Juniors).

Charge: Gross negligence of curricula activities.

Judge: (banging gavel on bench). Order in the court. Harumph! The court is met for the continuation of the case of the class of '36 vs. the class of '37. The clerk will now review the evidence of the previous day as registered in the court's records.

Clerk: (reading from court record). The class of '37 registered 154 members on September 11, 1933; the largest number ever to enter Brewer High School.

On September 29th, the class in question held a Freshman Reception in the school gymnasium with Coach Dana Dogherty acting as chaperon.

On November 17, 1933, the defendant is reported to have held class elections. Philip Lincoln was elected president; Finley Cogswell, vice president; Julia Sleeper, secretary; Barbara Gove, treasurer.

On May 23, 1933, some aspiring students of the defending class put on a one-act play entitled "Elmer." Said play was directed by Miss Vivian Drinkwater, class adviser. Following is listed the cast:

Elmer Collier	William Parker
Jane	Margaret Witham
Jeanie	Barbara Winslow
(Elmer's twin sisters)

Susa Collier	Barbara Gove
Mrs. Collier	Helen St. Clair
Miss Kenney	Evelyn McFarland
Manny Bell, the maid	Margaret Harnum
Hubert Brown	Finley Cogswell
Russell Jameson	Robert Goodwin
Pansy, Collier's dog

The second year in the career of the class of '37 was one of greater magnitude. It is recorded that on October 22, 1934, class elections were held. Former president, Philip Lincoln, had left school. The voting favored Harry Dalton for president, Finley Cogswell for vice president, Julia Sleeper for secretary, and Barbara Gove for treasurer.

On November 16, 1934, the Sophomore Social was held in the gym. Miss Drinkwater, Miss Gould, and Miss McCracken were the chaperons, as testified by the defense.

Judge: (awakening from his half reverie, and drawing himself up to enormous proportions). The case will now proceed in the routine manner. Has the defense any witnesses?

Defense Counsel: Yes, Your Honor, one, Mr. Junior.

Judge: The witness will take the stand and be sworn in.

(Mr. Junior goes to the stand and sits down).

Clerk: Do you promise to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you, Jeremiah?

Mr. Junior: (with right hand raised). I do.

Judge: Proceed.

Lawyer for the Defense: You have agreed to the evidence as read by the clerk from the court records?

Mr. Junior: I have, sir.

Lawyer: I assume that you will graciously admit the fact that during the first two years of the career of the class of '37 none of its members were letter winners in athletics?

Mr. Junior: Yes, sir, I admit that fact, but I believe I can supply enough favorable evidence to offset it.

Lawyer: Will you tell the court the results of the class elections for this, the third year?

Plaintiff's Counsel: I object, Your Honor.

Judge: Objection overruled, proceed.

Mr. Junior: Harry Dalton was again elected president; Stuart Quinn was elected vice president; Julia Sleeper, secretary; and Barbara Gove, treasurer.

Lawyer: (changing the subject). Are there any students in the defending class who have a marked ability along scholastic lines?

Mr. Junior: Emphatically, yes. The following have been on the Honor Roll this year: Loeta Brown, Finley Cogswell, Avis Campbell, Pauline Dole, Alma Fifield, Geraldine Foss, Charlotte Folsom, Robert Goodwin, Robert Gordon, Barbara Gove, Ethel Hewes, Joseph Houston, Arlene King, Evelyn MacFarland, Stuart Quinn, Janet Reynolds, Elizabeth Richardson, Helen St. Clair, Julia Sleeper.

Lawyer: (giving Mr. Junior an appraising glance). That is indeed an enviable record, as the court will agree. Now you, of course, realize that athletics are a prime factor in a school's curriculum. What can you say about the activities of the class of '37 in regard to football?

Plaintiff's Counsel: I object, Your Honor.

Judge: Objection overruled, proceed.

Mr. Junior: Well, as I remember it, the charged class was well represented on the gridiron last fall. F. Blanchard, Manager H. Dalton, G. Harding, W. Morrison, D. Perry, S. Quinn, T. Reed, and R. Titus received the much coveted "B."

Lawyer: Was the class represented otherwise than in football?

Mr. Junior: Yes, Arthur Winslow and Linwood Patten got their letters as player and manager of basketball, respectively. Moreover, Thelma Chute, Ida Mayo, Rhoda Montgomery, Barbara Winslow, and Margaret Witham received their letter for girls' basketball.

Lawyer: So much for athletics. Tell the court what you know of Junior Exhibition.

Mr. Junior: Junior Exhibition took place on April 17th. The following were selected to speak: Boys—William Carmalt, Finley Cogswell, Robert Goodwin, Robert Gordon, Stuart Quinn, and alternate, Carol Mullins; Girls—Thelma Chute, Virginia Dahlene, Elizabeth Richardson, Martha Sparks, Theresa Tracy, and alternate, Maxine Knights. For this affair, as well as for the commencement exercises next year, Harry Gordon was elected marshal.

Lawyer: That is all, Your Honor.

Judge: You may cross examine the witness.

Plaintiff's Counsel: We have no questions, Your Honor.

Judge: Has the defense any additions to the case?

Defendant's Lawyer: No, Your Honor; I move the court be adjourned.

Judge: Court granted. Court adjourned until same time next year to wit: the month of April in the year of our Lord 1937.

Finley Cogswell, '37.

Sophomore Class History

One bright sunny morning in September a group of dignified Juniors and Seniors waited patiently for the great Circus Train to come in. Each one was looking in the direction from which the train was to come. They watched with particular interest because they had heard that this was the greatest collection of animals and freaks ever known in history.

At last the whistle sounded. Through the windows of the train were seen freaks of every description in the form of 1938 "Freshies" coming to perform at Brewer High.

The morning was spent in herding these animals to their right cages, and after each had been placed in his stall, the trainers began taming them down. Since these animals had been running wild for three months, many trainers went home that night with worn and tired-looking faces.

Then came the job of leading this group to the "Big Top" for the purpose of trying to pick four people to manage the side shows. After each one was put on exhibition and his ability tested, Roy Hatt, Roy Arnold, Helen Kealiher, and Mary Piper were judged to be the best actors.

The first great performance was on November ninth, when every freak was dolled up in his best, and side shows were going in full swing. Parents came to see how well the trainers had succeeded in taming their offspring. Some noticed a little improvement had been made, while others were disappointed with what they saw.

As time went on, these different freaks in the side shows began to understand their work and perform their acts in an intelligent manner. So ended the show for the first year, and the freaks and their tamers went for a summer's rest.

With September came posters showing that the same circus was to reappear at Brewer High. Now the "Big Top" could be seen going up again, and everybody was getting ready for the second year's performance. As the animals had had a great deal of training during the first year, they came back ready to exhibit many new tricks.

This time dare devils represented their class in basketball. Elephants performed on the football field. Still others started side shows for themselves as musicians, and a barker took part in a side show at Orono.

In November a meeting was held in the "Big Top" for again choosing people to take charge of the performance for the second year. Those chosen were Roy Hatt, Harry Church, Claire Twomey, and Helen Kealiher.

The big show of the year was on January seventeenth. Every ring in the "Big Top" was filled with dancers of every description. Some danced very well, while others—just danced. At the end of the performance each animal was bountifully fed in payment for his excellent performance.

Thus we find two years of circus life ended.

When these animals enter Brewer High as Juniors, they are planning for a bigger and better show for nineteen thirty-seven.

Beatrice Littlefield, '38.

History of the Class of 1939

The portals of this institution of higher learning, none other than dear old Brewer High, were thrown wide open to welcome one hundred and forty timid prospective members of the class of 1939. Although the upperclassmen gave us a cold shoulder, Mr. Gordon and the teachers greeted us with open arms.

In previous years it has been said that the members of the Freshman class were continually getting lost and in other ways annoying the traffic officers; but we are proud to say that our class is apparently above the average, for no casualties were reported.

Our first great event was the Freshman Social held November 15, 1935. This was a sort of "get acquainted party" for both students and parents.

The customary election of class officers was held December 15, with the following students being chosen: president, Clinton Cosseboom; vice president, Shirley Corey; secretary, Zelda Baker; treasurer, Rita Mayo.

The class of 1939 can rest assured that they will be well represented on future Brewer High School basketball teams, for two of its members, Clinton Cosseboom and Shirley Corey, made the squad in their Freshman year. Clinton Cosseboom starred in several games.

When the Penobscot Fish and Game Association conducted an essay contest on "The Preservation of Fish and Game," four out of the five essays chosen from Brewer High were written by members of the class of 1939. The upperclassmen will have to admit that we can write themes. The winning Freshmen were: Frederick Champion, Shirley Corey, John Houston, and Hughene Phillips. Shirley Corey was fortunate enough to capture one of the five dollar prizes.

It is the aim of almost every pupil to make the cherished Honor Roll. However, not all of us can attain this distinction, for if we did the upperclassmen would have to take our share of low marks. Far be it from us not to shoulder our own loads. Those students who did receive all A's and B's were as follows: Zelda Baker, Nina Bates, Katherine Bearce, Corinne Campbell, Edward Connor, Shirley Corey, Clinton Cosseboom, Lucille Dougherty, Imogene Getchell, Willard Hall, Eleanor Hanson, Dorothy

Hatch, Beverly Leonard, Virginia Mitchell, Eileen Moran, Lillian Nelson, Irene O'Connor, Lucille Patten, Hughene Phillips, Marion Pooler, Dolores Rand, Virginia Roberts, Margaret Sherman, Lydia Stairs, Reginald Strout, Lorraine Verrow, Beulah Watters, Velma Weart, and Florence Young.

Our class is also well represented by some promising young musicians. The following members of the class play in the band: Malton Baudanza, Robert Carrigan, Clinton Cosseboom, Wellington Hamel, and John Houston.

The Freshman members of the orchestra are Zelda Baker, Clinton Cosseboom, Thais Downs, and John Houston.

The Freshmen also have some prospective debaters in Katherine Bearce and Paul Howard, both of whom made the debating squad.

"Great oaks from little acorns grow." Last September we were acorns, but now we have progressed far as we near the end of the first quarter of our growth. Before we join the giant forests of sturdy oaks, we intend to make a showing of which our principal, teachers, parents, and school will be proud.
Shirley Corey, '39.

TRIDENT BOARD

Dramatics Club

The Dramatics Club was organized in the spring of 1934 with Miss Arlene Wray as adviser. The membership consists of the Junior Speakers and a chosen few. The aim of this club is to present one-act plays for assembly programs, and to handle all dramatic activities of the school.

The officers for this year are: president, Spofford Avery; vice president, Asa Blanchard; secretary-treasurer, Julia Moore.

The plays presented during the year 1936 are as follows:

"Household Hints," a one-act play, was given on October 30, 1935. Those participating were: Charles Barry, Robert Goodwin, Lucille Maddocks, and Mildred Robertson.

"Thanks Awfully," a one-act play, with a large cast of characters, was presented in November.

"Listen in on the Campus," a three-act play, was presented at the football social held on December 12, 1935.

Radio plays were regularly presented each month at WLBZ.

A contest play was presented March 25, 1936, which was in competition with N. H. Fay High School, Ellsworth High, Bar Harbor High, and Orono High. Brewer presented the play, "The Blue Teapot." The students participating in this contest were: Spofford Avery, Stuart Gerry, Lucille Matthews, and Patricia Smith.

Cheer Leaders

Our football team made a fine showing this year. Much credit goes to the group that cheered very faithfully and incited the spectators to cheer harder for the Orange and Black. This group also aroused the interest of the students by their work in our rallies. These cheer leaders were: Thelma Chute, Gladys Ivers, "Gramp" McLaughlin, Lucille Maddocks, Barbara Winslow, and Margaret Witham. The alternates were: Patricia Smith, Louise Osgood, and Katherine Hyson. The color effect of their costumes was very striking. They wore white with Orange and Black sweaters.

School Dances

The Senior class of the previous year introduced to the student body a very new, but enjoyable feature. They advocated more social gatherings and dances at Brewer High School. This year few Friday nights have passed when there has not been a school social which has been attended by a large majority of the students.

The dances have been very successful and should continue. Chaperons have always been present at the activities, being received graciously by the students.

HI-Y CLUB

CHEER LEADERS

DEBATING COUNCIL

DEBATING UNION

Debate Union

An organization to promote interest in debating and public speaking. Its membership consists of two groups: one of general members who are interested in the general activity of a debate club, and a debate council for those who actually participate in debates. Anyone in the High School may belong to the Debate Union as a general member and may participate in the routine business of the Union, assist its financial enterprises, and attend its social affairs. Members of the council must have participated in at least one interscholastic debate, be a manager, or otherwise receive the approval of the coach by whom all appointments are made. The general policy of the Union is determined by the council.

1935-36 members of the Debate Union are:

Robert Goodwin, president.
Leola Boynton, secretary and treasurer.

Football Social

The annual football social held on December 12, 1935, took the form of a three-act comedy, "Listen in on the Campus," under the supervision of Miss Arline Wray. The cast was as follows:

Corinne Cameron	Hildreth Billings
Theodora Van Dyke	Lucille Maddocks
Bettina Burton	Leola Boynton
Marian Meredith	Patricia Smith
Nora	Thelma West
Gail Overton	Mildred Robertson
Molly Moore	Geraldine Williams
Courtney Calhoun	Lucille Matthews

X-E Club

The X-E Club was organized by the Junior Exhibition Speakers of the class of 1933. The purposes of the club are three.

1. To promote interest in Junior Exhibition.
2. To secure and file copies of desirable pieces to be used in future exhibitions.
3. To provide a social center. All members of the club shall have been elected as speakers or alternates for the Annual Junior Exhibition.

The X-E Club for the class of 1936 held its first meeting on February 11, 1936, at which time the following officers were elected: Gordon Bolster, president; William Laliberte, vice president; Lucille Matthews, secretary and treasurer.

* * * * *

Se' Beowulf Club

The Se' Beowulf Club is an organization open to Senior girls on the basis of creditable scholarship in English, character, qualities of leadership, and participation in school activities.

In the spring of each year four or five girls are chosen from the Junior class to become members. From this group the president and vice president are chosen for the following year.

The purpose of the club is to arouse interest in the study of English, manners, and good sportsmanship. Officers for this year were: President, Marion Morrison; Vice President, Lucille Matthews; Secretary, Virginia Barstow; Treasurer, Julia Moore. The Faculty Adviser is Mrs. Lawrie.

Assemblies

A very great interest was aroused this year in the students toward the assembly programs which were varied and many.

Finley Cogswell, a Junior, on October 12, 1935, gave an interesting talk to the student body on the discovery of America by Columbus, in honor of Columbus Day.

Early in the fall the Wilson Company brought to Brewer High School trained dogs. These animals were very clever and caused a great deal of amusement among the audience.

Charlie and Laurie Taylor again visited Brewer High School in the fall. Charlie gave an inspiring talk and Laurie assisted in making the assembly more interesting by playing music that he had composed.

Dean Hart and Professor Marrow of the University of Maine spoke to us about college life at the University. Later they talked with the students interested in entering the University in the fall.

The Brewer ministers, Reverend Mr. Hebert Aldrich and Reverend Raymond J. Cosseboom gave inspirational talks to the student body on two occasions.

Dr. Douglas, a well known commentator on peace, spoke to the students on the interesting topic, "Should the United States join the League of Nations."

Lillian Moore spoke during National Education week on the importance of democracy and its relation to education.

Mr. McPherson, in behalf of the Safety Campaign, gave statistics to show why they should be especially careful this year concerning safety on the highways.

A musical program, in which William Mitchell and Harley Pulk were principal participants, was presented January 11, 1936, for entertainment of the student body of Brewer High School. Mr. Mitchell, a well known vocalist of ability, rendered selections accompanied on the piano by Mr. Pulk.

Mr. Charles Gregory, President of the Penobscot Fish and Game Association, addressed the student body on the interesting subject, "Conservation of Wild Life."

Four students of Brewer High were excused from classes for the purpose of spending the forenoon at Bangor High School. They made an inspection, so far as conditions permitted, of the morning's work of the school within the big building, with the purpose in view that they might compare the work of their own school with that of the Bangor institution, and possibly obtain some ideas which, if applied here, might result in increased efficiency or other benefit to our student body. The report of their observance was given at the weekly assembly by the investigators, Lucille Matthews, Patricia Smith, Gordon Carter, and Gordon Bolster.

Dr. Hauck in a dignified address congratulated the school, its faculty, and parents of the pupils. He attributed winning the cup to a volunteer spirit.

On Friday morning, January 24, 1936, the students in an assembly held in the auditorium honored the memory of England's beloved monarch George V and paid their respects to the new sovereign, King Edward VIII, known for these many years to Americans and the rest of the world as the Prince of Wales. Leonard Clough spoke in behalf of King George V; William Laliberte explained to the students the English Crown, and Lucille Maddocks welcomed the new king by the topic, "Long Live the King."

It was on February 21, 1936, that the Seniors of the Brewer High School poured excitedly into the auditorium for the most important assembly program of the year—the assembly program in which were announced the graduation parts. This issue was not the only important happening in the morning assembly, for President Kenneth C. M. Sills of Bowdoin was the guest speaker.

The high ranking members of the Senior class who received these graduation parts are as follows: Spofford Avery, Virginia Barstow (Salutatorian), Leonard Clough (Valedictorian), Elizabeth Cole, Lucille Maddocks, and Thelma West, all receiving averages above 90. At this time the Principal announced the names of those who had achieved during their high school course a rank of 85 or better: Spofford Avery, Virginia Barstow, Hildreth Billings, Gordon Carter, Leonard Clough, Elizabeth Cole, Bernard Gormely, Lewis Hennessey, Clayton Hobbs, Lucille Maddocks, Evangeline Mathews, Marion Morrison, Carolyn Quimby, Mildred Robertson, Patricia Smith, Grace Stapleton, and Thelma West.

President Sills congratulated these students and reminded all pupils of the responsibility in life and urged them to prepare themselves well for it. He emphasized the fact that to be successful in athletics one should first be a success scholastically.

Perhaps the most important event in recent history at Brewer High School was at the special assembly exercises on February 29, 1936. Dr. Arthur A. Hauck, President of the University of Maine, made a personal visit to present to this school a handsome silver cup representing the University's annual Freshman Scholarship award to that school whose representation in the Freshman year at the University maintains the highest rank. The five girls whose work has been responsible for the signal honor are: Gwendolyn Baker, Vera Barstow, Laura Chute, Marguerite Kyer, and Barbara Whittredge.

Mrs. Lettie Thompson and Maurice S. C. Baker, members of the school board; Howard R. Houston, superintendent of schools; Principal Eugene B. Gordon; and the presidents of the four classes, John Gormely, Harry Dalton, Roy Hatt, Jr., and Clinton Cosseboom were seated on the platform.

Musical Activities of 1935-1936

Mr. Larsen, the new music director of the Brewer schools, requests that any individuals interested in participating in extra-curricula musical, confer with him.

To promote any successful organization, teamwork is necessary; therefore, let us cooperate, as have those students of previous years, and make Brewer High School famous for its musical talent.

Brewer High School Orchestra

At the beginning of the school year of nineteen hundred thirty-five and thirty-six, several difficulties existed on account of the lack of obtaining an instructor to fill the vacancy left by Mr. Guy Gove as a result of his resignation as director of the orchestra. His successor is Mr. Charles Larsen of Bangor. Mr. Larsen, who is very capable in the field of music, has proved himself an able leader of our orchestra. He is to be commended for his efforts to promote improvement in our organization. Thank you, Mr. Larsen, and may you have even greater success with your instructing in the future.

The orchestra has made the following appearances: The Teachers' Convention, the Freshman Social, the Football Social Play, the Junior Exhibition, Class Day and Graduation Exercises, and the weekly assemblies. All members cooperated with great enthusiasm.

This group of organized musicians will compete with those from the other sections of the State of Maine at Rockland. The date set for this event is May 16.

During the absence of Mr. Larsen, the orchestral activities were efficiently directed by Miss Thelma West, concert violinist.

The personnel of the orchestra for the school year of nineteen hundred thirty-five and thirty-six, is as follows:

Violins: Zelda Baker, Thais Downs, Barbara Gove, Helen Kealiher, Katherine Kirk, Barbara Law, Barbara Lawson, Marjorie Pontieur, Ernest Sprague, Elwood Titcomb, Paul Titcomb, and Thelma West.

Cornets: Gordon Carter, Robert Gordon, Carleton Herrick, and Robert McKeen.

Flute: Robert Goodwin.

Saxophones: Harry Church, and Linwood Patten.

Drums: Arthur Winslow.

Trombones: Donald Goodwin, and Morris Zitaner.

Basses: William Laliberte, and Alden Whitney.

Clarinets: John Eldridge, Glendon Harding, and John Houston.

Baritone: Charles Wyman.

Piano: Loeta Brown, and Charlotte Nickerson.

Junior High School Orchestra

The purpose of this organization is to prepare seventh and eighth grade students for the Senior Orchestra.

The Junior High School Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Larsen, has had a successful year. Their period of rehearsal has been Friday afternoons at 2.30 o'clock.

The outside activities of the Junior High Orchestra are as follows: The First Congregational Church Fair and the Girl Scout Minstrel Show. At both affairs the showing made was excellent.

Members of the orchestra are:

Violins: William Deacon, Barbara Law, Jean Thompson, and Elwood Titcomb.

Trumpets: Freddy Kane, Truman Knight, and Hollis Parker.

Basses: Norman Jordan and Robert Rowe.

Trombone: Donald Goodwin.

Drums: Harold Burrill.

Piano: Effie Ellis, Lila Horton, Joyce McKinnon, and Jeannette Perkins.

Band

Mr. Larsen has played an important part in the life and development of the band as well as in other musical organizations.

During the fall of 1935, at an assembly which will always be a pleasant memory, Mr. Larsen, the director, introduced Spofford Avery as the new student leader. The latter exhibited great talent in directing his fellow musicians in the school song.

This year the band has labored under great difficulties, which were many vacancies, being left by graduating members, and by students participating in athletics. For this reason the public appearances of the band have been comparatively few. The band did, however, appear at the football games, emphasizing the spirit created by the football team and, as it is a custom, it participated in the Armistice Day and Memorial Day parades in Brewer and North Brewer.

The enrollment of the band is:

Cornets: Gordon Carter, Clinton Cosseboom, Robert Gordon, Carleton Herrick, Waldemar Littlefield, and Robert McKeen.

Clarinets: Spofford Avery, Milton Brown, John Eldridge, Lincoln Hamel, Glendon Harding, and John Houston.

Saxophones: Robert Carrigan, Harry Church, Wendell Morrison, and Linwood Patten.

Flute: Robert Goodwin.

Drums: Malton Baudanza, and Arthur Winslow.

Baritone: Charles Wyman.

Altos: Stuart Gerry, and Richard Piper.

Basses: Asa Blanchard, Norman Jordan, and Alden Whitney.

Trombones: Donald Goodwin, and Morris Zitaner.

Drum Major: Charles Barry.

Thelma West, '36, William Laliberte, '36.

Football

Brewer opened football with about seventy-five candidates. Coach Dogherty had four lettermen from 1934: Fred Mullins, center; Tiger Wyman, a tackle; John Gormely, fullback; and Captain Howard Kenny, a halfback.

The Witches opened the season with a 6-0 win from Orono. Then Brewer traveled to Millinocket to lose 13-7 after a hard fought game. Old Town came to Brewer the following week and were beaten 14-6 by a scrapping bunch of Witches.

The following Saturday the Witches pulled a surprise and held Madison High to a 13-13 score until the last four minutes of play. Then Brewer weakened and a beautiful 20 yard pass was completed for a touchdown by Madison. Brewer lost by a score of 13-19.

After being held to a 0-0 tie by Rockland, the Witches beat Crosby 19-0 on the Brewer Athletic Field. On November 2, at Bar Harbor, the Brewer boys ate too many cream puffs before the game and didn't get started until the second half, but when they did it was a walk away—Brewer 25, Bar Harbor 0.

The Armistice Day game was played on the Mary Snow Field in Bangor. The Witches outplayed the Rams all the way, although the Brewer team played hard, the breaks were against them. The Witches never showed signs of quitting until the final whistle had blown. Brewer lost 6-0.

The following Saturday saw Brewer defeat the Piscataquis champs, which was Dover-Foxcroft. The score being Brewer 13 to Dover-Foxcroft's 0. This game ended the playing season for 1935.

Harry Dalton is to be complimented on his fine job as manager. Harry kept the Coach and players contented all of the time. Finley Cogswell succeeds Harry.

Coach Dogherty and the football team wishes to extend their thanks to Allan Sargent for giving his time and efforts toward improving the team.

Track

The first tryout was held April 1, 1935, and Coach Dole found sixteen men reporting for track. On May 4 the track team traveled to the University of Maine in a meet with the Maine Frosh vs. Bangor, Lee, Stearns, Old Town, Orono, and Brewer entering competition. Brewer placed second in this meet with Danforth taking first place in the 100 yard dash and second place in the 220 yard dash, Littlefield placed first in the discus throw, Perry tied for first place in the broad jump, and King placed second in the one-half mile run.

May 25 a triangular meet at Old Town with Bangor and Brewer competing. Brewer took second place and Danforth took first place in the 100 yard dash and Littlefield, Perry, and H. Mayo placed several times.

June 1 in the county meet Brewer took fourth place in the meet after Old Town, Stearns, and Bangor. Bangor outscored Brewer 19-18 in this meet.

May 22 inter-class meet was held on the Brewer campus. The Seniors took first place followed by the Juniors, Sophomores, and Freshmen in order.

Those receiving numerals in the inter-class meet were: R. Emery, E. Pooler, C. King, J. Dalton, R. Mayo, D. Perry, H. Mayo, and L. Patten.

Those receiving letter awards in track at the Senior Assembly are as follows: Capt. J. Littlefield, H. Danforth, H. Mayo, C. King, D. Perry, and Manager R. Piper.

D. Perry was elected Captain for 1936.

John Williams (deceased) was to succeed Piper. Johnnie would have made a very capable manager because of the interest he took in track.

John Gormely.

Baseball

Baseball season opened with about forty-five out for the team. Coach Dogherty had seven lettermen from his championship team of 1934. They were: A. Day, D. Gass, M. Bowden, E. Chute, V. Connor, H. Kenny, and Capt. M. Miles. It looked as though Coach Dogherty might have another championship team, but just before the first game two of the lettermen whom Coach Dogherty had been depending quit the team. Brewer lost the first game to Ellsworth 21-4. After the game a meeting was held and Danny Gass was elected captain for the rest of the season.

Brewer obtained suits from the Brewer A. A. early in the season, the suits were fixed and each suit had a black witch sewed on the back.

After the first game Coach Dogherty rebuilt his team and managed to win half of the league games. Danny Gass pitched two fine games against Bangor. Danny beat Bangor 16-8 in Brewer but lost the second game 14-7 due to errors made in the Brewer infield. Danny's hitting was also instrumental in Brewer's games. Stuart Gerry, Andy Verrow, and Jim Seely, all Juniors, pitched fine ball for Coach Dogherty. Gerry, a southpaw, struck out nineteen men at Orono, and Brewer won 18-3, setting a new record for a schoolboy pitcher in the News League. Other players who were outstanding are: A. Day, E. Chute, M. Bowden, H. Kenny, J. D'Amboise, and C. Browning.

Basketball 1936

The Brewer Basketball Team was not as successful this season as it has been in the past few years. Coach Dogherty opened the season with about twenty-five men on the squad. After he picked the varsity he decided to use the old suits and give some of the inexperienced Sophomores and Juniors a chance to gain experience for the future. So a Junior varsity team was formed and seven games were played.

The varsity had a little more experience but not one letterman on the team. After losing the first game to Presque Isle 56-17, Brewer beat Winterport on New Year's Eve 38-24. Then Brewer lost eight games straight before they defeated Orono 23-12. Then Brewer lost four more games before they came back to beat Orono 20-10 at Orono for the last game of the season.

What Brewer lacked in basketball ability they made up in fight. Most of the games were interesting. Jake Murray was outstanding for the Brewer team. Jake scored 167 points during the season. Other outstanding players were: Bones Carter, Charles Chute, Sank Philbrook, Giant Kenny, Art Winslow, Baron Gormely, Crow Dalton.

Boys' Intramural Basketball

Intramural Basketball developed into a great after school recreation this year in the Brewer Gym. Each home room had a team and Coach Dogherty gave the name of a college to each team to make the games more colorful. At the end of the season every team had played another team at least once. The four best teams were picked and a tournament was played. Notre Dame (207) and Princeton (210) were finalists in the tournament. Princeton conquering Notre Dame 19-17 in one of the most thrilling games played in the Brewer Gym this year. The winning team received medals, fitting trophies, worn proudly by the Princeton team.

Coach Dogherty plans to make Intramural Sports a bigger thing in Brewer High in the future.

Girls' Basketball

The team of 1935-36 had a very successful year, winning nine out of twelve games. The three hard fought games which were lost by a narrow margin were two to the Bar Harbor squad, which showed excellent teamwork, and one to Winterport, which had a fast, snappy sextet.

The squad under the supervision of the new coach, Evelyn Welch, proved a credit to her ability to coach girls' basketball. An alumna of Bouve, Miss Welch enjoyed much success in return for her untiring effort.

To Myrtle McLeod, our manager, who worked cheerfully and faithfully for the benefit of the team, we owe our thanks for securing the season's games. Credit is due also to the assistant managers, Katherine Kirk, Elene Gleason, and Arline Barchard. One of these girls, Katherine Kirk, well worthy of the position, has been elected next year's manager.

Margaret Witham, the only letterman available from the previous season, played stellar ball at the pivot position. She was consistent, a quality often lacking in the ordinary player. Witham's services will be available for the subsequent season.

Barbara Winslow, a forward, is to be lauded for her marvelous teamwork. She took advantage of every opportunity to pass. Being a letterman she will return next year as captain of the squad.

Rhoda Montgomery held down the other forward berth "with the greatest of ease." Her unusual ability lies in her footwork, for she can cut around an opposing guard with great dexterity. We are expecting much from Rhoda next year.

The guard combination was Lucille Maddocks, Thelma Chute, and Ida Mayo. Lucille was noted for her aggressiveness, a characteristic necessary to athletic success. In the Bar Harbor game she sustained a sprained ankle, which eliminated her from completing the season's play. This, of course, incurred a serious loss to the team. Lucille, a letterman, graduates in June, thus depriving the team of her valuable services.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

BOYS' BASKETBALL

Ida Mayo played stalwart ball at center guard. Her cooperation with Witham on plays originating from center was indeed noteworthy. Ida is returning next season, and will undoubtedly continue her peerless success.

Thelma Chute, a guard, rounded out a very formidable array. She displayed a great ability to intercept the opponent's passes, a quality truly component to success in basketball. Thelma is wearer of the much coveted "B," and will be back next year.

Gladys Ivers, Virginia Avery, and Mary Lunt, who were well grounded in the rudiments of the game, bolstered the team greatly. These girls are all Senior lettermen, whose skill in playing the game will be missed by Coach Welch.

The squad was composed of the following: V. Avery, T. Chute, M. Crosby, R. Dougherty, A. Fifield, G. Foss, G. Ivers, B. Littlefield, M. Lunt, L. Maddocks, I. Mayo, R. Mayo, K. McKenna, R. Montgomery, M. Piper, L. Reynolds, B. Waters, R. Whiting, B. Winslow, and M. Witham, Captain.

The following is a resume of games won and lost:

Girls' Intramural Basketball

Coach Dogherty arranged to have girls' Intramural Basketball this season. Each home room was represented by a team taking the name of some college or university. By the process of elimination Mount Holyoke (210) defeated Smith (208) by the score of 34 to 17.

Medals were presented by Coach Dogherty to the following members of the winning team: Katherine McKenna, Rhoda Montgomery, Martha Sparks, Dorothy Stalle, Ruth Whiting, Barbara Winslow, Margaret Witham.

LITERARY

Mary Declares Herself

Mary was sick of it—good and sick of it. All her life it had been, “Mary, will you do this?” and “How about it, Mary? You’ll do it, won’t you?” Being the only girl in the family, she had been mother’s helper as soon as her tiny hands had been able to do anything. In grammar school she had always been chosen to help teacher. During her high school days she had been forever helping someone do his algebra or translating someone’s Latin or typing a composition for one of her friends. In college, just before any kind of social activity, she had dashed hither and yon, setting waves, plucking eyebrows, buttoning dresses; and fixing her own hair, clothes, and make-up during the rare and infrequent intervals when no one was yelling for her.

Now, at the ripe old age of twenty-two, Mary was beginning to think that a kind heart was anything but a blessing. What kind of a sensation does one experience when one refuses to help? She had always been glad to be of service to her friends in need, but now she sat at her neat little desk in the hospital where she was head dietician, and looked out at the world much too cynically for her own good, or anyone else’s. True, she was going to the concert tonight, but the ticket had been given to her as a reward for selling twenty of the things.

She whirled away from the window, kicked a waste basket across the floor, and feeling better, returned to her work. Let’s see, Mrs. Brace in room twenty-one. One glass of orange juice, one cup of—oh, let her eat anything she wanted to. Dot Farley and Gwen Redman never put themselves out for anyone, and still they were always having a good time. Why shouldn’t she? She should, and would.

Her work was once more forgotten. A queer sort of resolution was taking form in her mind. She wrote it down. Resolved: To do nothing for anybody for a week. She would begin by refusing to help prepare supper when she arrived home. What was the cook paid for, anyway?

Feeling very wicked, she locked her office door, and left the building at exactly five o’clock. No, she would not stay one minute to help anyone. Stepping boldly up to the curb, she hailed a taxi. No more riding on the trolley car or walking, in order to have a little extra money for waiters’ tips. Paying her exact fare, she left the taxi, and mounting the broad, stone steps, went into the house.

Next, into the sewing-room to say “Hello” to mother; then out to the kitchen to tell the cook that she had no time to waste in preparing supper. Walking back into the parlor, she was confronted by young Bobby.

“Gee, I’m glad you’re home, Mary. These examples are worse than heck. Do ’em for me?”

“No, Bobby, you’ll have to do them yourself. I didn’t have any big sister to help me when I went to school. You’ll never learn by letting someone else do your work.” And Mary swept by, as Bobby gasped with amazement, fumbled for an answer, then retired to his own room, bewildered and hurt. “For gosh sakes,” he muttered, as he sat down to do his own problems.

The telephone bell broke the silence which had settled down upon the house. “Nora, answer it, please. I’m reading.” The astonished cook bustled in and took up the receiver. “For you, Miss Mary,” she called irritably, and returned to the kitchen. With queenly indolence Mary laid aside her magazine and walked leisurely to the telephone.

"Hello. Who? Oh, hello, Anna. The entertainment Friday night? Sorry, old dear, but I'll be too busy to bother with selling tickets. Guess you'd better try someone else. Too bad. Oh, no, I'm not sick. Never felt better. Good-bye."

Hadn't Anna been surprised, though, to hear a refusal from the lips of Mary, the old faithful? She'd show them! She was beginning to enjoy this independence—the feeling that she had a will of her own, and was the mat under the feet of nobody. She returned majestically to the parlor, where she remained until Nora called the family for supper.

At the table, Mary's father opened the conversation.

"Oh, Mary. Jack Stevens down at the office, you know—wanted me to ask you if you'd just as soon drop in tomorrow and give his wife some recipe or other you promised her. Says she's anxious to try it. You pass Jack's house every day, don't you?"

"I did when I walked, because it's a short cut. But I won't be walking tomorrow. Mother, suppose you can remember to send Nora down with the recipe for mock chicken pie?"

"Why, I guess I can remember, but Nora has about all she can do right here, Mary."

"She gets paid for it, doesn't she? But if she hasn't time, Bobby can do it."

The statement was made with such an air of finality that the subject was not broached again. Mary did not even inquire the next day whether or not Mrs. Stevens received the recipe.

The following night, upon emerging from the theater, where she and Jimmy, her fiance, had spent the evening, Jimmy casually remarked, "Boy, I crave candy. How about it, Mary? Going to make me some of your Maple Sugar Special when we get to your house?"

For one moment Mary wavered between her resolution and her desire to please Jimmy. Then stubbornly, "Oh, I'm too tired, Jimmy. Let's just stop in at the drug store and get a soda, or something. Won't that satisfy you?"

"No, it won't, but I guess it'll have to do. What's the matter, Mary? Don't you feel O. K.?"

"Oh, yes; I just said I'm tired. And I don't want to walk home, either, Jimmy. Can't we get a taxi?"

"Why, sure, Mary, but you'd never let me, before. Always said you loved to walk."

Mary made no answer, and after drinking a soda which neither of them enjoyed, Jimmy took her home. Mary was not very happy that night. Somehow, she had not enjoyed the evening so much as she had expected to.

At the supper table the following evening, Mary's father remarked, "Jack says his wife hasn't seen you go by lately, and wants to know if you've been sick. I guess she misses having you drop in every day or so, Mary."

No answer. Mary's mother was the next to speak. "Weren't you rather late getting home tonight, Robert? What happened?"

"Gee, Mom, I had to stay for my 'rithmetic. Miss Evans said my work was gettin' terrible. But, gosh, I can't understand how to do that per cent and interest stuff. Mary always was the only one that could explain anything to me so's I could understand it, and she won't help me anymore."

After supper, there was no call from Jimmy. Feeling quite miserable, Mary went to bed early. The next day, having lunch down town, she could not help noticing the hostile glances of the waiters. No tips for a few days was undoubtedly the answer. The people at the hospital, too, although treating her with more respect, perhaps, seemed so distant. True, she had not worked one second overtime for four nights. She would not give in. What would the world do if she had never been born? Resolutely she maintained her decision.

Two evenings later, Jimmy came.

"Hello, Mary. Want to see a show? I've got a taxi all ready."

After the show, Jimmy glanced sidewise at Mary.

"Want a soda, Mary?"

"No, thanks, Jimmy." Another resolution was forming in her mind. Now they were home again.

"Come on in, Jimmy. It's early yet."

They went in.

"Let's go out in the kitchen, Jimmy. Shall we?"

They went out.

"Jimmy."

"Uh huh."

"Do you still crave candy?"

Jimmy showed interest.

"I always crave candy."

So Mary, the Old Faithful, Mary, the Dependable, tied on a little, ruffled apron, and, feeling happier than she had for a week, whipped up a batch of Maple Sugar Special.

The Shamrock

On March the seventeenth each year the Irishman proudly displays a shamrock on the lapel of his coat. The majority of folks know that this plant is a tribute to the memory of Saint Patrick, Ireland's patron saint, but few know why the Irish chose the shamrock in preference to some other token.

The following story is often related as the true reason for the Irish wearing each year his loved symbol. When Saint Patrick, an enthusiastic missionary, tried to convert the Irish to Christianity, he found that they had great difficulty in grasping the doctrine of the Trinity—three persons in one God. In an illustration to teach them this belief he picked up the little shamrock bearing its three leaves on one stem. This simple illustration from nature became widely known.

Besides being a plant symbolic of Christianity, it had a reputation for magical properties. Perhaps the latter reputation comes from the "natural magic" of the celts. If a piece of shamrock were to be placed in a baby's cradle that was ample protection against all childish illnesses; eaten like water cress, shamrock would allay all fevers; worn next to the heart it would ward off evil spirits; a maiden had only to bury under a rosemary bush a shamrock pricked with the name of the youth whose love she sought, and pray to Saint Patrick and all would be well.

At one time it was customary for all boy babies born on Saint Patrick's Day to be named for the Saint and to be trained for priesthood.

Although many of the quaint customs that were formerly followed have been perhaps forgotten, no true Irishman ever forgets to wear the shamrock on the day set aside as sacred to the memory of one of the greatest of all missionaries.

The Mysterious Widow

Alice Craigge, daughter of the Andrew Craigge, owner of several successful factories scattered over the state, repressed a sigh. Idly roaming about the objects in the softly-lighted room, her glance rested on several sheets of paper, the white cleanliness of one marred by several short paragraphs. As she meditated on this work, she shook her head sadly. For more than a year she had tried to write a story which would so impress the publishers of a successful magazine that they would buy it. But there had been so many social obligations to fulfill and so many pleasures to divert her attention, consequently the story had never been written. True, Alice Craigge did not have to write to earn a living but merely to satisfy an ambitious fancy. Often many distinguished guests present at the Craigge residence, when shown several hurried compositions, written by Alice at odd intervals, would be astonished and a little awed at the evident ability manifested there. Aside from all this praise, however, Alice was wearied by the continual round of activities and even the furniture seemed to stifle her at times. To throw aside all idle amusements, to go away to a place of rest and freedom, where she might write that particular story, was Alice's only desire.

Deep in thought Alice was startled by the sound of steps outside the room. Swiftly she picked up a magazine, pretending to read. It was Mrs. Craigge, the elderly but smart society matron, who entered. Stepping briskly toward Alice, her mother said, "Here you are! I have been wondering where you could be!" Ignoring the remark, which had called for no answer, Alice announced quietly, calmly:

"Mother, will you please cancel all my engagements for the following week. I am going to reserve a room at Brockton Inn, for the sole purpose of composing a story worth reading." Suiting her action to the words, she carefully deposited her magazine on the end table and walked out.

The west-bound train steamed to a stop at the railway station. A young woman, simply dressed in white linen, alighted, and signaled to a cab, waiting at the curb. Giving the driver a suburban address, she entered the taxi and soon was moving swiftly down the street. A few moments later, this same young lady, no longer as Alice Craigge, a wealthy debutante, but as Sadie Grayson, a working widow, entered a brown stone house and began her abode there.

The small town of Brockton buzzed with excitement. From Tin Pan Alley to West Broadway, the gossipers were truly busy.

"Did you hear that a widow is at the Inn? And they say she is all alone."

"Look's mighty suspicious to me! Never heard of any such goings-on before in Brockton!" And thus it continued from morn till night. Poor Sadie Grayson did seem wicked.

Of course, some of the old crowd back home ventured to find Alice Craigge. The answer was, "What! The Alice Craigge? Not at Brockton!"

Aided by the friendly atmosphere and healthy conditions at Brockton Inn, Alice was doing exceedingly well at her story. Already she had drawn an outline to a spectacular robbery, and had progressed nearly to the climax. Absorbed in her work, she knew no hint of the suspicion and distrust arising in this town, amiable to her as yet. And so the revelation came to her from a clear sky. Arising early one morning, she dressed hurriedly, intending to complete her story before the day ended. Accompanying her breakfast on a tray was the morning news. As she ate her toast, Alice unfolded the paper and merely glanced at the front page. Imagine her astonishment to find these words glaring up at her from the heavy typed sheet:

Mysterious Widow, Sadie Grayson,
Suspected as Accomplice in Robbery.

Below in smaller print were the details. She was announced as the woman used as a spy in a famous robbery previous to this time. And now a visiting guest in Brockton had lost his most valuable securities and the widow at Brockton Inn, having drawn up a draft for the almost identical robbery, was suspected. Suddenly Alice knew that someone had seen the outline for her story and supposed it was meant for a real robbery, and this was the result!

Several days had passed since the astounding news was revealed to Alice. She had been questioned and a warrant had been issued for her arrest. She had, however, enough money to allow her, with several guards, to continue to live at Brockton Inn. The first thing and the most natural was for Alice Craigge to wire her parents. But on second thought she decided she would disentangle herself from the difficult situation alone. She was responsible for being here, no one else. For several days, Alice pondered on the situation. Every move on her part was carefully watched and she, even, became a curiosity to tourists, who had learned the news. Many asked to see her. All of this was very trying. What could she do? Suddenly one day an idea presented itself to her and without any hesitation, Alice Craigge, with bold determination resolved to extricate herself by it. Immediately asking permission to travel with the guards to a nearby city, she tied up her manuscript, completed for many days now, and departed. Reaching the city, she hurried to the most prominent publishing office. The door stood open and she walked in. Two guards accompanied her and remained just inside the door. Advancing to a position directly in front of the publisher, she extended her manuscript to him and said:

"I am Alice Craigge. Will you please read this story and report your decision to me at the earliest date?" At a brief nod from the publisher, the young woman, head held high with pride, left the office.

Several days later in the local newspaper at Brockton appeared an announcement which the young widow Sadie Grayson, thought to be connected so mysteriously read, with the famous security has been offered a sincere apology by the criminal officials. For had it not been discovered that she was the famous Alice Craigge?

Not long after the most successful short story of the year was published, "The Mysterious Widow," in all the local newspapers, as well as in all the prominent newspapers.

How to Conserve the Deer in Maine

The State of Maine was settled by English speaking men, who had been brought up on such songs as, "My Heart's in the Highlands a Chasing the Deer." The hunt was popular in the mother country. It was the subject of song and poem, of painting and tapestry. One of the most beautiful patterns of china by Wedgwood is called The Fallow Deer.

The early settlers of Maine were naturally hunters. The people did not have time to hunt for pleasure, but rather from necessity, as deer were often their only source of fresh meat. It was not until sometime after the Revolutionary War that hunting became a sport in the United States.

Penobscot county, Hancock county and the Machias waters, where was felled the tallest and largest pine ever cut in the State of Maine, produced outstanding hunters and trappers.

The first to limit the amount of deer allowed an individual was passed in 1850. In 1900 the law was changed to two deer, one buck or one doe; in 1911 two deer, one buck, and one doe; 1920 one deer, buck or doe. These laws served and do serve to some extent to preserve our deer, but poachers, night hunters with jack lights, do much to kill off our deer. Night hunters should be more severely dealt with, perhaps a heavier fine might help.

Most wasteful slaughter is caused by raiding deer yards in the winter during deep snows. The law governing this should be more rigid.

Bobcats are continually destroying deer. One way we can remedy this is by passing a law prohibiting the trapping of wild rabbits. Rabbits are bobcats' natural food, and when rabbits are not plentiful, bobcats attack the deer. Another way to control this situation is to put a high bounty on bobcats in sections where they are doing damage to deer.

Dogs that run deer should be looked after. I think all hunting dogs should be tied up during closed season. Stray dogs should be taken care of at once.

During severe winter weather conditions, it would not be out of the question to have food placed in localities where it is known that deer abound.

We should have more game reservations in our state. There are plenty of wild land owners who would be only too happy to give their land for such reserves. Why can't Maine have a big state park where her sons may go and spend their vacations "far from the maddening crowd?" Other states have such parks with pure water supply and sanitary conditions. The citizens often spend their entire vacation camping there. Here the wild life is protected and the youth is brought up with the idea that it is illegal to destroy the game and wild life in the park.

If we are to protect our game in the State of Maine, we must teach the children in the public schools to admire and protect the wild life of the state. Just as children may be taught the harmful effect of alcohol and the horrors of war, so they can be taught to love the game and wild life of the state. In this way the voters of tomorrow will see to it that the deer in Maine are not wastefully destroyed.

The Preservation of Deer

(Prize Winning Essay)

The deer, which is found more or less extensively throughout the North American continent, is one of the most popular if not THE most popular of all Mother Nature's wild animals. When speaking of its being popular in this sense, I mean it is the most desired.

If there is a certain automobile, or certain style of women's dress or coat, or other fad on the market that is highly sought after, the manufacturer of that article simply telephones or cables to his plant and orders them to have so many thousand more ready for the market at a certain date. The demand for his goods had increased; so almost automatically has the supply.

The demand for the deer's life has always been great. Yet have any of us telephoned or cabled to the deer plant and asked that the supply be increased? No, we certainly have not and probably couldn't if we wanted to. The deer would not understand our wishes. There are, however, certain steps that we can take that will increase the supply of deer automatically.

Shorten the hunting season. Every year there are thousands of deer killed in the State of Maine alone. If the season in our county were shortened from the approximate figure of forty-five days, as it is at present, to say thirty days, think of the immense saving of deer life. By a little simple arithmetic we find that the season will have been shortened fifteen days or about one-third. Therefore why not a saving of thirty-three per cent of our deer each year? After a few years we probably could go back to our normal schedule.

Preserve our forests. When we cut down the forests, we are destroying the deer's home. Throughout most of the hunting season the deer stays in the woods, especially during the day. During the winter months when the snow is deep, one generally finds the deer in the woods in yards where he gets his meals by browsing on young trees. If the forests were to be cut off and no more set out, the deer supply would lessen, due to the fact that in hunting season he would have no place of shelter and in winter nowhere to find his food supply. Therefore if our forests be preserved so will our deer supply.

Enforce the game laws. Unfortunately for the deer, there are a certain class of people who pay no respect to our game laws. As the wardens in our state are few in number, with large areas to patrol, a large part of the responsibility of obeying the laws is left to the individual. If possible, I think it would be a good idea if the number of our wardens were to be increased. However, if each hunter would cooperate with these men, who are trying to enforce the laws, much could be done to aid Mr. Deer.

Although there are several other methods to preserve our deer, I list these as the most important. If we set these three major objectives as our goal, shorten the hunting season, preserve our forests, and enforce the game laws, I believe Mr. and Mrs. Deer will do their part in seeing that the supply is as great, if not greater, than the demand.

The Forgotten People

Contrary to the opinion of many, the no-school whistle is an unwanted signal to some students. You may exclaim, "Of course, it is a desirable thing." What pupil does not rejoice when he hears the five deep-throated blasts? The ones who do not receive the news with a glad heart are those who have traveled far, only to discover that there is no school.

Very little thought has been given in the past to students who come great distances, some traveling more than ten miles, to attend our schools. On stormy days when the schools remain closed, many of these country boys and girls make great efforts to reach Brewer, only to find that their trips are in vain. Many cannot hear the signal at their homes; and others are already at the school building when the whistle blows.

At the present time, I can think of only one solution to THE FORGOTTEN PEOPLE problem. Nearly all of the students who live in the rural districts have telephones in or near their homes. Why would it not be practical, useful, and sensible to appoint certain students in the various districts—Orrington, Eddington, and Holden—to act as the no-school signal, for the country pupils? When inclement weather keeps the schools from opening, these few selected persons could be notified as early as possible. The other students could then communicate in some way with the nearest appointee.

The country pupils have shown their willingness to brave the elements. Why is it not fair, therefore, to make it possible for them to be notified in case of no school, thus saving many severe and useless trips?

Crime Does Not Pay

"Butch" Dugan, alias "Dead-eye-Jake," was a member of "Spike" Kelley's human butchers. He was a short, stubby, rat-like man, having small piggish eyes, which were separated only by a long, crooked nose. These eyes seemed to be too closely set together. He was Kelley's ace "butcher," having an unerring eye for the employment of the "gat."

"Hey, boss, got some bad news for yah," yapped Butch.

"Can the chin music, mug, what do ya think ya doin', broadcastin'?" roared Kelley.

"O. K., boss, O. K., I'll pipe down, but I'm on da level, get me?" answered Butch, "'Slug' Murphy squealed to the 'bulls' about that bank job up in Lincoln, Nebraska."

"Yeah?" queried Spike, suddenly starting in his chair.

"You hoid me," affirmed Dugan, "but he didn't tell all he knew; said he'd be back later."

"He'll be back later, huh?" mused Kelley, "Maybe!"

"What d'ya want me to do, boss?" asked the eager Butch.

"What d'ya think, ya big yap," Kelley roared, "Sometimes I think you're as dumb as ya look."

"O. K., boss, when do I start da doity work?" whined Dugan. "Listen, Dugan, there's twenty grand in it for ya, if ya'll bump the squealer off before six o'clock tonight, sarvy," returned Kelley.

Now mentioning twenty grand in "easy dough" to Butch Dugan was like waving a red flag at a bull; it made him want "to go places and do things." His trigger finger was itching to get to work.

"I sarvy, boss; I'll have him playin' a harp, or whatever they play, in twenty minutes," promised the willing Butch.

We find Butch slouching along a narrow, one-way street in the underworld section of Chicago. Under one arm he carries a "fiddle" case, which in reality contains a German-make machine gun, especially constructed to fit into the case. The trigger projects through the case at the point where the handle is attached.

As Dugan slouches along he keeps his coat collar well up over his ugly features, in order to avoid identification. He presently turns a corner and stops before a dingy two-story house. There is a newsboy standing on the corner shouting: "Extra, extra, all about the burning of the big shoe factory; ten thousand soles lost!"

"Hey, kid," addressed Butch, there's two bits in it for ya, if ya'll go up there an' tell the guy there's a pal down here that wants to see him."

"Sure thing, mister," responded the boy, overjoyed at the thought of having the lump sum of "two bits" for his own keeping.

"As soon as Murphy shows his carcass, I'll give him a lesson on da fiddle that he never experienced before," promised Dugan to himself.

Murphy fell into the trap unsuspectingly. Appearing at the doorway, he was riddled by the "notes" from Dugan's "fiddle."

Dugan hopped onto a car which had been drawn to the scene by the noise of the gun.

"Listen, buddy, if ya know what's good for ya, ya'll do what I say. Sarvy?" roared Dugan to the astonished occupant of the auto. "Now get out o' town while the gettin's good, or ya'll have an attack of acute indigestion caused by lead poisoning."

The driver knew better than to try anything with the desperate Dugan holding a gun on him.

"Head for da country, an' step on it," commanded Dugan.

The speed of the vehicle became nearly uncontrollable, as the driver strived to comply with Dugan's command. It so happened that the road on which they were speeding was constructed on top of a steep ridge. On either side were great ledges, which bordered on a drop of some hundred feet.

As the car careened madly on its way, Butch began to lose his grip on the door. Ahead was a huge hole in the road caused by the escaping of frost; the driver saw this too late. Dugan was torn loose from the car by the terrific impact, and hurled bodily toward the edge of the precipice.

The bandit held mightily to the few remaining inches of turf between safety and death. He cried out pitifully to the Great Creator but Dugan had reached the point of paying the penalty for the many sins he had committed in his cruel lifetime.

Exhaustion soon overcame him. With a blood-curdling yell, "Butch" Dugan, the destroyer of many lives, fell to a horrible death upon the rocks below.

A Legend of the Passamaquoddies

Throughout Maine many Indian legends may be found, some of the brave deeds of chiefs and some of the sad fate of lovers. There is an old Indian legend of the unhappy love of a Passamaquoddy chieftain and his princess bride.

A chief of the Passamaquoddies, a brave and gallant youth, took as his bride a beautiful Indian princess and lived happily for about a year. At this time he went out with his hunting party into the lake region, probably at the headwaters of the St. Croix River. During his absence his wife gave birth to twins, a rare thing among the Indians. This was a sign that the father and mother were in the favor of the gods. A messenger was sent to the chief to tell him the news, but on the way the runner stopped at the village of another Indian tribe to spend the night. In this tribe lived another princess with whom the chief had been in love. Angry and jealous, the princess took the message which read, "You are the father of a girl and a boy," from the sleeping runner and changed it to read, "You are the father of a pig and dog."

The chief upon receiving the message was very sad, because Indian law required that if misshapen children were born, the mother as well as the children must be killed. He immediately sent the messenger back with the words, "Do not kill them until I return." The runner stopped at the same camp on the way back and the same princess stole the message and changed it thus, "Kill them before I return." The message was received. The council decided that the heart-broken father of the princess must carry out the chief's wishes.

He took his daughter and the two children out into the forest, but instead of killing them, he killed a deer and two kids, buried them and then drove the unhappy girl into the forest with her children. A few days later as she was sitting on a rock wondering what to do, Mickelmess, the "little good fellow of the forest," found her and out of pity took her to his cave beside the Salmon Pool of the St. Croix.

Meanwhile the chief returning home read the false message and angrily asked the old father if he had done as the message directed. The old man confessed how he could not kill the girl and that by now she would have been eaten by wild animals. In spite of this the chief set out, wandering about in the forest calling his wife's name. At last he came to the Salmon Pool and saw the princess with the children sitting beside the water. She looked up at the sudden breaking of the brush and saw him emerge from the forest. Filled with fear for herself and her children, but hoping that all anger was for her alone and that in her death he would pity his little ones, she took one last look at them and threw herself into the surging waters of the Salmon Pool.

This was more than the stricken chieftain could endure. He held the children in his arms for a while, then he ordered Mickelmess to take them back to the tribe and to see that they received their rightful heritage. Alone and sad the chieftain stood on the edge of the pool looking skyward. Suddenly he took one step forward and disappeared into the waters to follow his princess to the happy hunting ground.

Nothing

Born of necessity, or rather for the preservation of my rank and consequently of my social position at home, this essay is written; about nothing, for nothing, and, likewise, contains nothing.

I presume that if one were to delve into the intricate philosophy of imagining a complete void, his mind would eventually cease to exist; for if he reached his objective of nothing—that is, if his mind in all its wanderings and flutterings arrived at the point where nothing prevailed, the mind, being in a void, would necessarily have to be void itself. To illustrate more clearly, suppose we have a box with nothing within its six sides except air which will be disregarded. If you place your hand in the box there is no longer an empty space because a portion of your anatomy is present within the confines of the box; that is, the space has matter in it, therefore it is not void. Let us now suppose that we have a space completely filled with nothing and which will remain void in spite of men. Now, what is this space like? If, when one's mind conceives the image or reaches the point where it is imagined that it is in that mass of nothing, and if as we are imagining the space remains void, isn't it logical to suppose that the person's mind should become void also to correspond with the hypothesis that our imagined space cannot be filled?

It is possible for us to conceive only two reactions: either the space will contain matter and not be space, or the matter will become nothing and all will become space. In the case of the box the former condition was prevalent. In the case of the mind—it's nothing, anyway, or to be more specific, it is not a material substance, so why fret and fume about the mind becoming nothing when nothing cannot damage nothing nohow?

Note: Contrary to all appearances there is a title to this essay and is, I think, quite appropriate for the subject of the work.

Ode to Spring

The sun is rising in the sky,
Its long, bright beams are cast,
And birds begin to sing on high,
To think that Spring is here at last.

And when we see the Spring
With all its beauties tender,
We lift our hearts, a song we sing
To God, who is the sender.

The Beauty of Grit

The test of a man is the fight that he makes
And the way he stands on his feet and takes Reverses of life—its knocks and its blows;
The grit that he daily shows,
It isn't the victory that's easily gained
That makes the man who is honored and famed,
It's his honest endeavor that's proof of his worth,
Such men as these are the salt of the earth.

Things I Have Never Seen

There are so many things I've never seen:
How palm trees set or distant islands lean
As though they listened to the waves that croon
A drowsy song beneath a tropic moon;
Or dawn at sea when grey, thin clouds of rain
Bring back a longing for the land again.

I've never seen the wonders in the sands
Of that great desert where the Sphinx still stands
Unceasing guard; nor yet the rock-bound nest
Of fierce-eyed eagles on the mountain's crest.
These things I have not seen, may never see;
But something of their beauty reaches me.

Road to the Rainbow

It's a long, long way to the rainbow
And the gold we'd fain possess;
We are ever stumbling onward,
In pursuit of happiness.
For it's hard to talk of sorrow,
And it hurts to think of pain;
We can't wait one fleeting moment,
When renown and fame's our gain.
Stop and ease another's burdens,
And another's sorrow bear.
When at last the goal's accomplished,
You will find your rainbow there.

High School Through the Eyes of a Senior

Two students may live in the same town and among the same surroundings, know the same people and attend the same school, and yet graduate from that institution with far different views upon life and matters in general. One may have made a host of friends, have participated in many of the school's social activities, and have enjoyed himself to the highest extent but be hopelessly unprepared for problems in life after graduation. He may lack the power to concentrate, to think deeply, to be self-reliant. He may have no interests outside of his intimate friends and gay social life. In short, he is not really educated. The other student may have acquired a large number of friends, have been a leader in activities of all kinds, have the ability to study and to read intelligently, to think for himself, and to be interested, not only in himself, his school, his home, his friends, but in what is going on in the world. This person has received an education. To be sure he may not secure a position any sooner than the other, but he will be able to concentrate and to make the most of even his leisure time.

There are many other types of students, but these are the first two that were under consideration when I stopped to think about the matter. Nearly everyone would prefer to be like the latter—possessing many interests and a trained mind, since he, too, can enjoy life as much as the other, but he can also settle down to serious thought when the case demands.

Now that I am a Senior and can review some three and one-half years of high school life, I realize that there are many things that I have left undone. I know that I have not been equal to the latter student, and I hope that I have not been so shallow as the former. I understand that whether the four years spent in high school are useful or not depends entirely upon the individual concerned and his attitude. They should be four of the best years of one's life and it is a pity that we waste so much time. In fact, practically the only thing accomplished during the first year is getting adjusted. After that school life really begins. One realizes that school can mean more than just a place to spend one's time day after day. One feels that, after all, if four whole years are to be spent there, one may as well make the best possible use of them.

The Senior year is, of course, the climax to our high school course. Have I played my part well? I look forward to graduation with disappointment as well as eagerness. I do not really want to leave. There have been times when I would have liked to see the whole place mysteriously disappear, but I no longer have that feeling. I am just a little afraid. Am I prepared for what is ahead of me? I cannot tell. I should be, but have I been sufficiently conscientious and eager to receive everything that high school has had to offer? Perhaps not, but anyway, it has been fun all the way through, even if I did not realize this at first. I feel that whether or not I made the most of my time, I have derived certain very real benefits that school life alone can give.

The Plight of a Plum

A purple plum upon the tree
Is round and smooth and fair,
It makes a poet glad to see
It hanging boldly there.

But, oh, alas! There'll come a day,
When bards must change their tune;
For what, indeed, can poets say
About a lowly prune?

Virginia Barstow, '36.

The Fog

Some say 'tis an atmospheric condition;
This strange and mysterious fog,
On dark nights it appears as an apparition
Hovering over many a marshy bog.
Who knows from whence it came,
And the nature of its existence,
It may be a spirit seemingly inane,
Which slowly rolls out into distance.

America the Free

(Tune: "America the Beautiful")

Let Germany prepare for war;
Let England rise in arms;
Let Russia show her mighty strength,
France call her gendarmes.
America, America,
God help you to keep free,
That we may live in harmony
On this side of the sea.

Leonard Clough, '36.

The Taxpayers' Song

(Tune: "America")

Roosevelt is it, to thee,
We owe this spending spree
Of our Taxes.
Long will we be in debt,
'Cause of your Alphabet,
Which worked in vain to get Prosperity.

Leonard Clough, '36.

The Old Stump

When we were little children,
Upon this stump we learned to climb.
We used the moss for carpet soft,
And chipped the edges fine.

Full many a day we sat and played,
Upon this age old stump,
For refreshments we had mother's cookies,
And, water from the pump.

Now that we are older,
We take our studies to this spot,
Where much time is wasted,
In wishing for what is not.

Lillian Moore, '36.

Library Report

The Library has been more active this year than ever before. Twenty-three girls have worked in the Library this year, far more than in former years.

Each of these girls have given up at least two study periods a week and two nights each month for night duty.

B. Fickett, a Senior, has spent the first twenty minutes all year in the Library, while M. Clark, a Sophomore, has given up her noon hour to take care of the needs of the out-of-town students.

There are at present over 1,000 books, magazines, pamphlets, etc., in the Library. Several new books have been added this year to make the Library more complete.

The librarians work hard to keep the Library neat and clean. If all the students would cooperate and use the Library only for a reference room, we could have a much better library system than the present one.

The girls who have worked in the Library this year are:

Seniors: L. Moore, H. Saunders, T. West, M. Sutherland, and B. Fickett.

Juniors: A. Fifield, C. McEachern, D. Stalle, B. Abbott, P. Browning, M. Crosby, E. Jordan, L. Byers, and A. King.

Sophomores: E. Morrill, N. Pulk, M. Piper, M. Pontius, E. Gleason, F. Gallant, and M. Clark.

Head Librarian: Mrs. Lawrie.

First Assistant: F. Mayo.

L. Spiller: "Did you ever have a proposal?"

E. Moore: "Yes, a fellow once asked me to marry him over the telephone but he had the wrong number."

M. Morrison: "Mama, is papa going to die and go to heaven?"

Mother: "Why, child, whoever put such an absurd idea into your head?"

M. Lunt: "Do you know what a Rip Van Winkle Rug is?"

H. Jordan: "No, what is it?"

M. Lunt: "One that has an unusual long nap."

Coach Dogherty: "Have you taken a shower?"

C. Mullins (frightened): "No sir! Is one missing?"

Miss Crosby: "What is the longest sentence?"

F. Mullins: "Life sentence."

Coach Dogherty: "If man springs from monkeys, what does woman spring from?"

Brilliant Student: "A Mouse!"

H. Swett: "Why the fact is as plain as the nose on your face."

F. Hodgins: "Everybody but you say I have a pretty nose."

Mrs. Arsenault (in English Class): "What is the plural of child?"

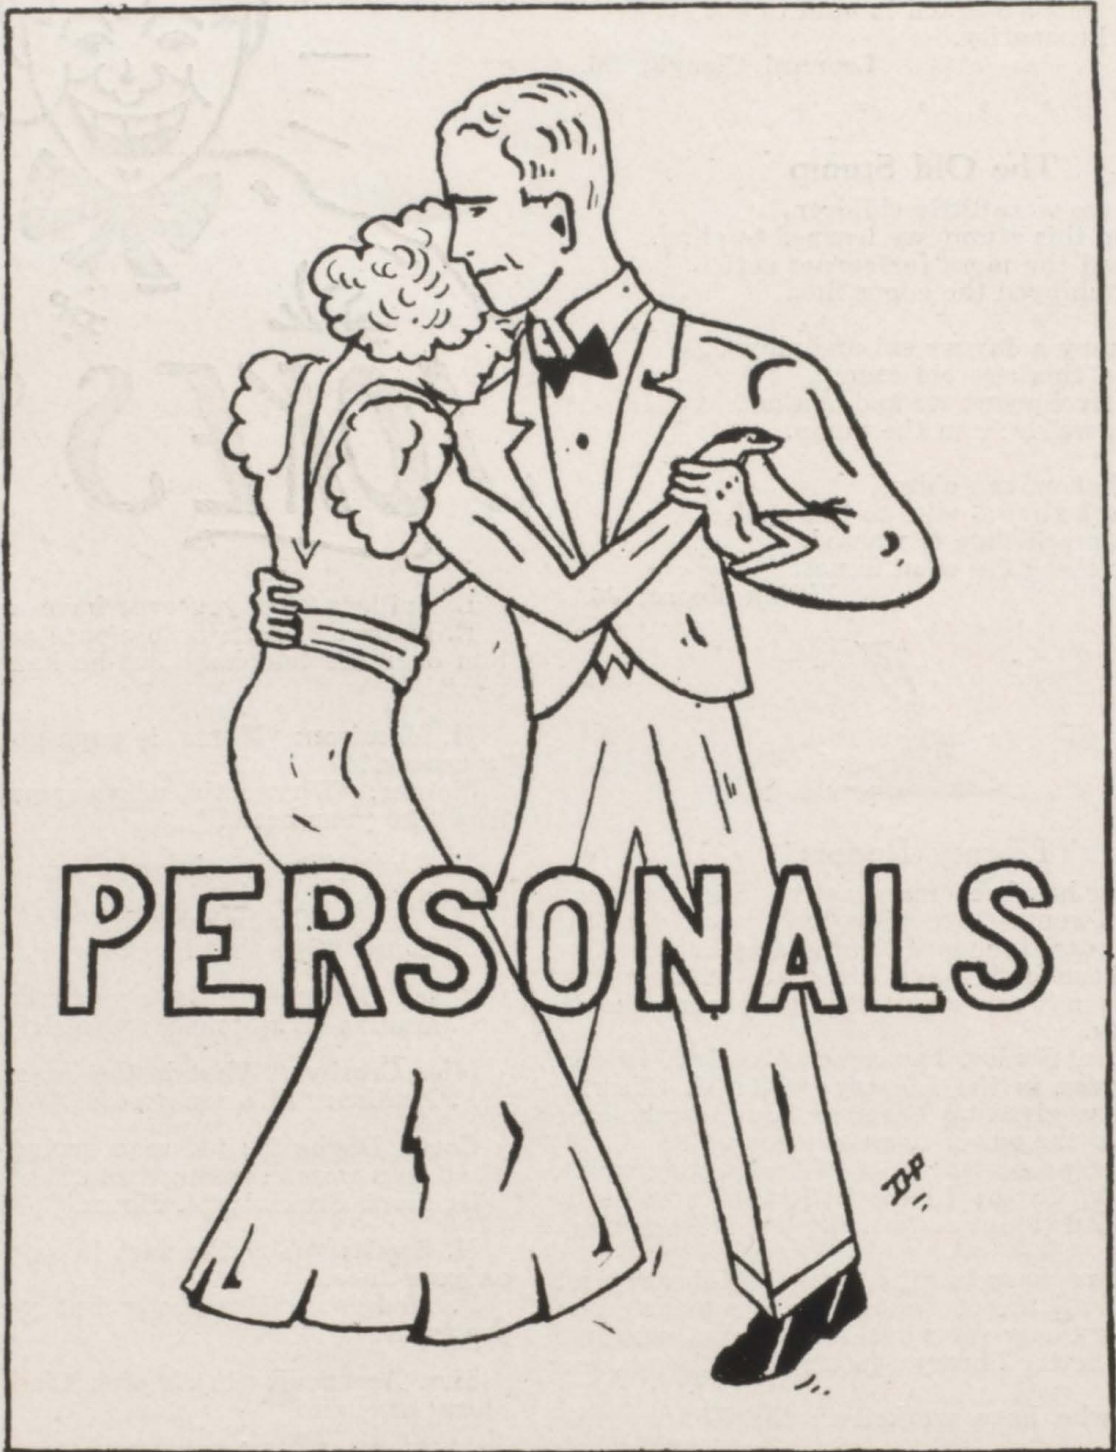

T. Reed: "Twins."

Charlie Barry: "They say, dear, that people who live together get to looking alike."

L. Moore: "Then you must consider my refusal final."

Gove: "Nature provides well for mankind."

E. Moore: "I should say so! Now what could be more convenient than a pair of ears to hook spectacles over."

Secrets of Success

- "Push," said the button.
 "Take pains," said the window.
 "Never be led," said the pencil.
 "Be up to date," said the calendar.
 "Always keep cool," said the ice.
 "Never lose your head," said the hammer.
 "Make light of everything," said the fire.
 "Find a good thing and stick to it," said the glue.

Jokes

- C. Barry: "I am indebted to you for all I know."
 Mr. Gordon: "Oh, don't mention such a trifle."
 Miss McCracken: "Chute, what are vagrant laws?"
 C. Chute: "Vagrant laws are, o----o----o (voice from rear), Bum."
 Charlie Chute: "Oh, yes, Bum laws, they are no good."
 M. McLeod: "You ought to have been at church today. The sermon was a wonder."
 J. Lynk: "So I heard. Who was telling you?"
 Mr. Gordon: "In what course do you wish to graduate?"
 J. Dalton: "In the course of time."
 Charlie Barry (in Farrington's Studio): "I don't want a very big picture."
 Mr. Farrington: "All right, just keep your mouth shut, then."
 Alice: "Why, Hadley! I thought you were supposed to graduate this year."
 Hadley B.: "I was, but the faculty encored me."
 Miss Wray: "Your translation is as good as dirt!"
 A. Blanchard: "Well, that covers the ground, doesn't it?"
 Mr. Bradstreet: "What's the trouble with voting by voice in election?"
 L. Hammond: "It makes too much noise."
 M. Price to Coach Dogherty: "Say, doesn't your wife miss you when you stay out until 3 o'clock in the morning?"
 Coach: "Once in a while, but usually her aim is perfect."
 "There's nothing to it," said Charlie Chute as he scratched his head.
 Miss McCracken in History: "What does the President receive every year?"
 M. Sutherland, '36, from rear of room: "The first fish."
 Freshman: "I'll not allow anyone to trample on me!"
 Senior: "Then why don't you put up a sign 'Keep off the Grass'."
 J. Gormely: "Extremes met at our table today."
 J. Williams: "How's that?"
 J. Gormely: "I ate devilled ham and had angel cake for dessert."
 Miss Crosby to M. McLeod: "Absence makes the marks grow rounder."

1. The Chieftain—Maine School of Commerce.

Your magazine is one of the most entertaining that we have received. We especially enjoyed Chattanooga's letters to Maybelle.

2. La Salle Leaves—La Salle Junior College.

We found your short stories and essays interesting, but we would like to hear more about your athletics.

3. Pine Needles—Mattanawcook Academy.

Your literary department shows marked talent, but why not have more poems?

4. The Scroll—Higgins Classical Institute.

We thought your short stories particularly well written and also liked your column called, "This and That from the exchanges."

5. The Hillcrest—Bucksport.

You have an attractive magazine which shows much hard work. We think more stories would give the reader additional pleasure.

6. W. S. N. S. Tip Top.

You have a very fine pamphlet, largely about school events. Would not the inclusion of short stories, essays, and poems be an improvement?

7. The Pythia—Winter Harbor.

You have a well balanced magazine which shows much effort as well as literary talent. We found it interesting to notice all the school activities in which each student has taken part. Don't you think a Personals Column would be fun?

8. The Jester—Ellsworth.

Your paper shows much originality, the pen and ink sketches are exceptionally clever, but we would like a few more jokes.
