Senior Spotlight

Logan Landolt

Logan has been part of the DCC community since before he was in diapers and transferred to DCS his sophomore year after deciding he wanted the same great experience his older brother had. He values the dedication of the teachers, the care shown to every student, and—of course—Levi McClellan's free comedy shows. His favorite memories include the unforgettable Yellowstone trip and an iconic moment as the Burger King throwing FIREBALLS. When asked what he'll miss most, his answer was simple: "The squishy gorilla. Enough said." As a senior, Logan feels God calling him to live out what he's been learning and step boldly into adulthood. After graduation, he's excited to do hard things, become an apprentice electrician, and cultivate a future for himself and his future family—all with no homework - while saving up for "a jet boat, a hot dog roller, a Joy Teriyaki chicken bowl, a Chick-fil-A franchise, and a sweet, old house cleaner named Rosa."

Micah Argubright

Micah and his family joined DCS in his 8th-grade year during COVID, and quickly found a place rooted in community and care. Some of his favorite memories come from the Yellowstone Living Classroom trip—everything from bison and bears to exploring natural wonders and growing closer with his class along the way. Micah values how deeply everyone at DCS looks out for one another and how intentionally the school prioritizes relationships. His favorite classes were 10th grade Boys Physics and English, with Mrs. Lorenzen making a lasting impact for graciously "putting up with his strange, scatterbrained questions and answers." This year, Micah has felt God strengthening his confidence—both in his faith and in what he knows—bringing a growing assurance in who God is. After graduation, he's excited for the freedoms and growth that come with the next stage of life and plans to attend George Fox University to pursue clinical psychology.

Cooper Smith

Cooper and his family joined the DCS community after his previous school closed, and over the years he's built a collection of meaningful and memorable moments. Some of his favorites include 8th-grade boys Earth Science with Mrs. Clear—where curiosity ran wild and random science questions were always welcome—Mrs. Lorenzen's class this year, where she takes time to talk with seniors about life and decision-making, and sword-fighting in Mr. Davidson's military science cohort. With so many great memories, Cooper knows he'll miss seeing his friends every day most of all. He's especially valued the daily opportunity to dive into Scripture and reflect on God's character alongside his classmates. This year, Cooper has felt God teaching him to deny himself and "take up my cross daily" (Luke 9:23), learning to make sacrifices even in the ordinary and to do hard things for the Lord when he doesn't feel like it—because "Christ in me; the hope of glory" is the only pursuit truly worth clinging to. After graduation, Cooper plans to pursue a degree in mechanical engineering and become an industrial designer… or possibly become a lacrosse-playing hermit in the Swiss Alps, eating hermit crabs to develop spider senses and embrace peace, love, and harmony.
